McTIGUE WINS DECISION OVER SIKI

Ringside, Scala Theatre, Dublin, Ireland, March 17.—Mike McTigue of New York won the decision over Battling Siki, light heavyweight champion of Europe, in their 20-round bout here tonight. A large crowd saw the contestants. Georges Carpentier, go down to defeat. Heavy police guards protected the boxers against cranks who threatened to hurl bombs into the ring.

NINTH ROUND—Siki fought furiously, crowding the Irishman to the ropes. The negro shaved away with both hands. The referee warned Siki for using kidney punch.

TENTH—McTigue started to do more fighting. The Irishman staggered Siki with a heavy right to jaw. Siki clinched to save himself. McTigue kept after him.

ELEVENTH—Siki scored heavily with a left to face. McTigue ripped hoe two solid punches. McTigue's right ear badly bruised and his brow bleeding. Siki's round.

TWELFTH—Siki landed solidly on McTigue's eye. McTigue missed repeatedly. Siki kept shaving away with both hands. The negro's round.

THIRTEENTH—Siki swung viciously with his right for a knockout. McTigue crossed a short right to jaw. Siki came right back. Round even.

FOURTEENTH—Both fighters came out tired. Siki missed a right. Neither did any damage. Round even.

FIFTEENTH—Siki waited for McTigue to come clear across the ring. The black man resorted to swinging his right. They spent most of the round in clinches.

SIXTEENTH—Siki landed flush on the Irishman's mouth with a right. Siki had McTigue on the defensive. The Irishman bled freely. Siki's round.

Boston American Always Prints the Big News First!

A newspaper is known by the scoops it delivers. A scoop is a piece of news that is printed before the other papers get it. The Boston American never misses a day without scooping the town.

Yesterday the American printed the first story of the mysterious disappearance of Edward O. Sampson, Tufts College senior, and the ONLY pictures that were printed of the missing student and his sweetheart.

It printed the first account of the plan forcibly to feed Nicolo Sacco, hunger striker in Dedham jail.

It carried the first account of the Boston activities and identity of Albert E. Guimares, held by the New York police in connection with the mysterious death of the New York model, Dorothy Keenan.

It printed the first and only photographs shows of Dolores Dixon, who is suing Babe Ruth for $50,000, alleging him to be the father of her unborn child.

If you want news before it becomes history, the Boston American is YOUR newspaper.

BIG SUPPLY OF ALCOHOL MISSING

35,000 Gallons, Stored in a Bonded South Boston Warehouse, Gone

A shortage of 35,000 gallons of denatured alcohol was revealed today at the bonded warehouse maintained by the Suffolk Export Company at No. 401 Summer street, South Boston, by Federal agents.

The authorities are seeking Frank E. Bell, the president and treasurer of the concern, reported by them as missing from his home and office and usual haunts.

The concern is bonded by the Federal Government for $100,000.

Huge shortages in other warehouses are suspected. Charles J. Smith, enforcement supervisor, is out running down evidence with agents today.

CHIEF SOURCE.

Startling exposures of the withdrawal of alcohol from warehouses was hinted by Smith and his agents.

The Suffolk warehouse has been one of the chief sources of supply of alcohol used in synthetic whiskey in gin hereabouts, agents declare.

Most of this denatured alcohol has been redistilled. Some has been sold without redistilling, agents say. Denatured alcohol is a rank poison.

TRUCKLOAD TRACED.

Some of the poison liquor cases at City Hospital may be due to this missing denatured alcohol, the Federal authorities admitted today.

One truckload was traced to the rear of No. 25 Murdock street, Somerville. Two stills were seized there. Both were being used to redistill the denatured product.

Mr. Smith said this afternoon there is a government tax of $4.60 for each gallon of alcohol improperly used. The total owed by the Suffolk Export Company is approximately $150,000.

FOILS BANDITS IN TRAIN HOLDUP

Tacoma, Wash., March 17.—Three bandits held up a Northern Pacific train at South Prairie today, but not before an express messenger took a $15,000 package from the safe and hid it. He and the train crew and twelve passengers were lined up on the station platform, but he refused to tell where the money was hidden. As the bandits rode through Buckley, nearby, their auto was riddled with bullets by citizens and a few miles farther on a posse overtook them. Two, younded, were captured. The third escaped.

Siki-McTigue Fight by Rounds

FIRST ROUND

Siki led off, swing both hands at McTigue as they met in the middle of the ring. The black man was wild, however, and McTigue easily evaded his blows. They clinched and wrestled about, the referee having a hard time prying them apart. McTigue landed several body punches and took a couple to the head in return.

SECOND ROUND

Both fighters were sparring more cautiously as they came up for the second round. Siki began to use his left and landed with it several times. McTigue winced when he was hit, as the negro was using vicious punches.

Siki varied his left hooks to the body with left jabs to the face and soon had McTigue on the defensive. It was easily the champion's round.

THIRD ROUND

The negro's attack in the second had served to stir up McTigue. He came out fighting mad in the third round.

FOURTH ROUND

Siki rushed out of his corner with a ferocious expression on his face. He swung wildly with his right and McTigue stepped away. Siki rushed again and the Irishman ducked and landed with his left.

Siki continued his rushing tactics. Once he got the Irishman into a corner, but McTigue by clever blocking prevented the negro from landing a damaging punch. It was another even round.

FIFTH ROUND

Siki again charged on McTigue as the fifth round opened. McTigue clinched. The referee again had a hard time prying them apart. McTigue blocked Siki's wild right swings. No damage was done to either man. Another even round.

SIXTH ROUND

Siki changed his tactics again and lashed out with his left as they came together in the sixth. He scored twice before McTigue clinched. McTigue came back with a hard right to the negro's stomach. They clinched and wrestled ignoring the referee's commands to break. McTigue blocked cleverly as Siki resumed his rushing tactics. It was another even round.

SEVENTH ROUND

It began to look as though McTigue was trying to tire out the champion. The Irishman led with his left and then drew away as the negro charged. Siki kept swinging away with his right, but he seldom landed. McTigue's clever blocking evoked much cheering. When he landed a solid punch the crowd set up a wild yell. McTigue had a slight edge in this round.

EIGHTH ROUND.

Siki again came out swinging his right and, as usual, missing with it. McTigue landed a couple of stiff lefts to the body. In a clinch McTigue hooked his right to the jaw. Siki's rushes got him nowhere. McTigue cleverly blocked all his punches with his forearms. McTigue again had the edge.

HARRIS MAY GET JOB IN RED SOX INFIELD

Hot Springs, Ark., March 17.—Until the expected arrival of one or two new infielders at the Red Sox camp, Joe Harris, veteran outfielder, will cover one of the inner cushions. That was decided today by Manager Chance. In today's game between the Regulars and Yannigans Harris worked at third.

Joe has been holding down second base until today, and with Shanks and Fewster already in the race for that position, and only "Zeb" McMillan a candidate for third the Red Sox boss decided it would be better to groom Harris for the hot corner post where he will either force McMillan to his best work, or perhaps crowd the former Yankee from the regular lineup.

Southpaw Hullhan was started in the box against the Senators here. The youngster, who was wild last season, has shown good control this Spring. He always did have a lot of stuff.

Manager Mitchell again sent his youngsters in to open the game, Conlon at short and Smith at third. A few more good days and the pair will be regulars.

TROOPS GUARD BOUT

Scala Theatre Swarmed by Mob Eager to See Big Ring Battle

Dublin, March 17 (By International News Service).—A great crowd turned out to witness the Mike McTigue-Battling Siki battle for the world's light heavyweight championship here today.

McTigue won the bout.

The streets around the Scala Theatre, where the bout was staged, were literally jammed with people.

The Free State forces maintained a strong guard to prevent possible disorder.

It was decided this afternoon to start the bout at 7:30 instead of 8 o'clock as originally planned.

There was delay, however, in getting started. The fighters did not enter the ring until eight minutes past eight. Both got a warm reception. Thousands swarmed outside the arena awaiting the result.

BOSTON GANG USED LAWYER GIRL MODEL VANISHES AS LURE

Obert Sletten, Ex-Norwegian Vice-Consul, Leaves String of Alleged Creditors

This Is a Theory of Police Who Find "Sucker" Lists in Her Apartment

Obert Sletten, Boston lawyer, has mysteriously disappeared.

He is president of the Norway Club of this city. He was vice-consul for Norway at this port, resigning last July.

He is the man who attracted wide attention a year ago by denouncing Boston for having "hoi holes" which he said menaced young Scandinavians sent here for education. This was right after the suicides by poison of Pauline Virginia Clark and Otto Harold Larsen, the latter a Norwegian student at Technology.

Sletten, according to admissions of friends and close relatives, has left behind a string of creditors from whom he borrowed money.

His brother-in-law, Hartley Gardner, of Windsor street, Arlington, said today he thought these borrowings would not exceed $10,000. Others said they might run to $15,000.

BORROWED TO PAY DEBTS.

Mr. Gardner said Sletten made investments in the war and lost a few thousand dollars. On top of that he felt obliged to make good some financial dealings of a trusted friend. These exigencies drove him to his

New York, March 17.—Out of the maze of clews thus far uncovered in the mysterious murder of Dorothy Keenan King, "Broadway Butterfly" and cloak model, who was found chloroformed to death in her apartment on West Fifty-seventh street, there developed today new trails.

One led into the bucket shops of Wall Street and the other in the heart of Schoelkopf's $520,000 gem robbery.

In the slain girl's apartment detectives found a lot of "sucker lists" bearing the names of hundreds of prospective investors in speculative stocks and bonds.

WOMEN AS DECOYS.

Almost coincident with that discovery Matthew D. Biddulph, self-confessed participant in the Schoelkopf gem robbery, was taken from the Tombs by Acting Inspector Coughlin to the district attorney's office where he was subjected to a severe examination concerning the chloroform murder.

The utmost importance was at-

BELIEVED FOOD WAS POISONED

Thayer in Superior Court at Dedham.

Sacco is a paranoiac. His insanity started shortly after his conviction and grew steadily worse, in the opinion of one expert.

He stopped eating because he feared the food might be poisoned by Socd. He was suspicious of his wife, he knew, had been influenced by political influences coming through the air.

MEANS POSTPONEMENT.

This new turn is expected to mean an indefinite postponement of the hearing on arguments for a new trial for Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, both convicted of killing Parmenter Frederick H. Pearl during the hold-up at Alessandro Berardelli's South Braintree April 15, 1920.

The court chamber was packed when Dr. Elwyn L. Cahoon, state field State Hospital, the first witness, made his appearance today. Outside were gathered many members of the Amalgamated Textile Workers' of Boston, busily discussing the chief topic of interest—the further agitation mentioned in the statement.

Orders to the demonstrators that the agitators leave the court house at once and immediately guard today. Scores of plainclothes men, supplied to the throng, assisted in executing the plans of the protectors.

Uniformed men with patrols stood around the seats guarded by the entrance. All persons entering the building were searched on suspicion.

Dr. Cahoon declared Sacco's "queer mental reactions" and that his "mentality isn't its own normal" were corroborated by Dr. Abraham Myerson of Boston Psychopathic Hospital and Dr. Albert Thomas of Foxboro State Hospital.

Dr. Myerson testified: "Sacco told us he had stopped eating because he feared he was being poisoned by the jail food. He claimed to be influenced by electrical currents coming through the air."

Dr. Thomas declared: "Sacco is a paranoiac. He gives us a typical picture of the development of the paranoiac condition beginning a few months after he started his jail sentence."

AFRAID OF POISON.

"He was generally suspicious of everything and everybody, not excluding his wife, on whom he relied. When we asked him why he took water instead of food he asserted that he was afraid of poison in his food. He said he drank the water that he might remain alive long enough to see justice done."

Dr. Thomas testified: "Sacco told us he was under influences that came through the air. He said he was affected by horrible sensations in different parts of his body, and that he suffered from electrical influences at times."

He said the time had come when he must no longer sacrifice himself for his wife and children, and that he must carry out his own ideas. He referred to his hunger strike.

Dr. Thomas came to the conclusion that his failure to eat was due to his mental condition. He is mentally diseased. Something should be done to treat him and feed him as he is actually irresponsible.

District Attorney Harold P. Williams asked: "Do you recommend that he be sent to a hospital or other institution for treatment?"

Dr. Cahoon: "I do."

Q.—Have you any institution in mind as the most feasible?

Attorney E. Hill, former corporation counsel for Boston, representing the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, objected. He asserted that he feared there should give medical testimony only and not make any recommendations.

The three alienists recommended Boston Psychopathic Hospital. Judge Thayer said:

"I will send this man there if I can be assured that he will have a constant guard day and night for two weeks."

PRECAUTIONS ASSURED.

Dr. Myerson assured the court that every precaution would be taken to prevent any escape. The superintendent of the institution was then summoned by telephone to appear at the courthouse for a conference with the judge and counsel for both sides.

Dr. William Wrangle Wood, executive officer of the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, testified the hospital was not equipped, in his opinion, to care for the prisoner and he could not guarantee that Sacco would not escape.

Dr. Wood declared night and day guards, in three shifts, would be needed and that their quota of help would not make this possible.

Attorney Thompson of the defence counsel asked Dr. Wood whether there were not some special ward where Sacco could be kept. Dr. Wood replied that the special ward was where general patients were kept and the attendants could not be expected to devote entire attention to one patient like Sacco.

SOME OTHER PLACE.

Attorney Thompson asked why a policeman could not be put on guard.

This brought from Dr. Wood the declaration that he would prefer Sacco be sent to some other institution; that there had been one suicide at the hospital and that Sacco might attempt the same.

Judge Thayer: "I thought we had solved this problem but apparently we have not. Who is the superintendent of the Psychopathic?"

Dr. Campbell. Dr. Wood replied, but he is in New Haven and is not expected back until Monday.

When followed an effort of the court to obtain from Dr. Wood a verbal assurance that Sacco would not escape and a failure by Dr. Wood to commit himself positively to such assurance.

WOULD DO UTMOST.

District-Attorney Williams suggested asking Dr. George M. Kline, State commissioner of mental diseases. But they found Dr. Kline was out of town.

Then Superintendent Cahoon of Medfield State Hospital, was recalled. He thought the Psychopathic the best place.

The court asked whether Dr. Cahoon could assure proper guarding of Sacco at Medfield. Dr. Cahoon said that, if the court so ordered, he would do his utmost to guard Sacco.

Dr. Myerson was recalled. He thought it "extraordinary" if the Psychopathic could not take Sacco, under the circumstances.

Dr. Wood was recalled.

"Don't you think that, if you locked the doors and depended on your barred window," asked Attorney Thompson, "that you could guard this self-starved man from running away?"

DEFENCE OBJECTS.

"We will do all in our power," was the most Dr. Wood would vouchsafe.

District Attorney Williams said he favored Bridgewater State Hospital, the only apparent objection be ing its distance.

But Attorney Hill of the defence immediately demurred:

"That was not our objection. It is because Bridgewater is exclusively for insane criminals and our client is not a criminal. It is enormously important that our Commonwealth be conspicuously fair in its attempt to save this prisoner's life and to safeguard his rights.

"Nobody wants Sacco to escape, especially his own counsel, who seek instead his acquittal if he is rendered."

Dr. Myerson was recalled to the witness stand by Attorney William G. Thompson of the Boston Bar Association, interviewer and counsel for the defence committee.

He was asked: "Could sacco's conviction unbalance his mind if he were innocent of the crime charged?"

Objection was raised and eventually the question was excluded.

Judge Thayer complimented attorneys for both sides for calling the attention of the court to Sacco's mental condition. He then said:

VANZETTI CAUSES STIR.

"If a man becomes insane at any time before judgment and conviction the prosecution must cease. The proceedings must not go ahead against an insane man. The time should never come when we should depend on the arbitrary rights of an individual in preference to the laws of the State—"

Vanzetti, jumping to his feet, cried excitedly: "It has already come."

Court attendants jumped to the side of the prisoner's dock. He was ordered to "shut up." He did.

Judge Thayer continued: "The hearings must be suspended on the motion for a new trial until after Sacco's treatment."

A recess was declared at this juncture to await the arrival of the executive officer of the Psychopathic Hospital.

They judge Sacco's most alarming mental change is his apparent loss of interest in the outcome of his appeal for new trial and his persistent refusal to be advised either by his attorneys or his wife, for whom he has the greatest affection.

Sacco's hunger strike rivals other famous hunger strikes. He began his fast Thursday, February 15. He asserted then he would starve himself to death or go free.

BESEECHED TO EAT.

His wife and little son, his attorneys, Vanzetti, the members of his defence committee and scores of personal friends beseeched him personally and by letter to refrain.

Jail attendants persistently placed food before him. His wife, Rosa, and Vanzetti ate while he sat at the table with them in Dedham Jail. The aroma of the food made his suffering more acute. Still he refused to weaken.

In some respects Sacco's fast is similar to that of Lord Mayor Terence MacSwiney of Cork, who died in Brixton Prison, England, on the seventy-fourth day of a hunger strike.

Other hunger strikers of note whose cases compare with that of Sacco from a standpoint of public interest where Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the noted suffragette leader, and Karl Wanderer the Chicago murderer who shot to death his wife and a vagrant he had hired to stage a fake hold-up in the doorway of his apartment house.

Medical Definition of Just What a Paranoiac Is

PARANOIA (medical)—Mental derangement; insanity; especially a chronic form of insanity, characterized by a very gradual impairment of the intellect, systematized delusion and usually by delusions of persecution or mandatory delusion, producing homicidal tendency. In its mild form, paranoia may consist in the well-marked egotechnic exhibited in persons commonly called "cranks." Paranoiacs usually show evidence of bodily and nervous degeneration, and many have hallucinations, especially of sight and hearing.

BELIEVE GANG IN UNDERWORLD SLEW MODEL

tached by the police to these two new leads. If, as expected, they are found to converge, it will be at a point where a criminal syndicate of bootleg blackmailers and gun robbers is disclosed operating with beautiful women as decoys.

Police do not know the owner of the "sucker list." The mysterious millionaire "Marshall" may be the owner, they believe. He has been frequently referred to as a fire man and broker with establishments in New York and Philadelphia. Albert E. Guimares could have owned the list, too, the police pointed out.

It was considered a most valuable clue in the quest for the person or persons who killed and robbed the beautiful young model.

GUIMARES IS RELEASED.

Biddulph, who recently pleaded guilty to taking part in the robbery of Mrs. Schoellkopf, of Buffalo, was taken before Assistant District Attorney Peora. Coughlin and Captain of Detectives Carey were present during his examination.

Peora refused to go into details of the questioning, saying Biddulph was being quizzed as well concerning the Schoellkopf as the King case. The assistant district attorney said, however, that Biddulph admitted knowing Guimares "in a casual way." He did not know Miss King, Biddulph said.

Guimares, the Porto Rican favored by Miss King among her many suitors, was released from jail on bail of $10,000 today. The matter of his being held as a material witness in the case was not over until Monday.

Miss Hilda Ferguson, a show girl who figured with Miss King for a time, said the murdered girl "lived in mortal fear of some man."

FEARED FOR HER LIFE.

"I met Dot on a gay party several months ago," Miss Ferguson declared. "She took a liking to me and asked me to become her roommate. I had nots of men friends, but few girl friends and I was glad of the opportunity to live with her.

"She told me in confidence of some one, afraid to live alone, and I wonted be a comfort to her. She was highly nervous at all times. Whenever the 'phone rang it was an awful shock went through her body. She was mortally afraid of some man. I never knew Miss King to see the man nor heard her mention his name. Not long ago she instructed me not to admit anyone to the apartment and to inform no one that she had gone there.

"She never made a confidante of me, save that she would boast about her "angel," who, she sometimes referred to as Marshall. Wilson and a titled name. Dot always wore gorgeous things, jewels and furs worth many thousands.

ROBBERY A BLIND.

Although costly articles of jewelry and an expensive fur coat were missing from Miss King's room, the theory was advanced that the robbery is a blind and that the model was killed so as to keep her silent on a police disclosure of the activity of the gang of crooks, composed of both men and women.

A black comb, described as a 'man's comb," which was found near the bedside of the slain girl, figured in the investigation today. The police believe it dropped out of the murderer's pocket as he forcibly administered the deadly anaesthetic to his victim.

FEARED ONE MAN.

The mother of the dead model has given the authorities the names of a man who she believes may know how her daughter died.

"This man is capable of anything," Mrs. Keenan cried. "My daughter feared this man. She showered money and gifts on him life told her he had once committed murder and escaped any penalty. I know she was in terror of him."

The millionaire friend of Miss King, known only as "Marshall," who is said to have been the last known person to have visited the model before her death, is expected to be questioned today, it appeared. John Coughlin, directing the inquiry, declared.

The identity of "Marshall" was disclosed by Jack Lanagan, a former cabaret owner sweetheart of Miss King, now in Chicago. Lanigan said that "Marshall" literally showered the girl with expensive gifts.

Information was obtained that Dorothy King (or Keenan, her real name) did not spend Wednesday night in her apartment, as had been believed.

She is believed, according to this information, to have spent the night in a hotel on upper Broadway.

MOTHER NAMES SUSPECT.

Miss King is now thought to have slipped from her apartment after the departure of her midnight visitor, the millionaire known as "John Marshall," and to have gone out to join another woman and two men.

Mrs. Keenan divulged that her daughter married at eighteen and shortly after obtained an annulment.

KILLS DAUGHTER TO END ILLNESS

Defiance, O., March 17 (By International News Service).—A charge of murder probably will be filed today against George Brown, seventy-seven, a farmer, accused of murdering his daughter, Celia, fifty-four. She had been shot through the head. Neighbors declared that Brown, voicing belief that his daughter, who was ill, would be better off dead, announced his intention of killing her.

BOY DROWNED IN MUDDY RIVER

A boy believed to be James Gallagher of Longwood avenue, Brookline, was drowned in Muddy River, opposite the Fenway, today.

Young Gallagher, the police say, was fishing with a group of boy friends, when he fell into the river. Thomas Murphy of No. 144 Audubon road jumped into the river to bring the body to the surface.

Murphy got hold of the body, but the water was so cold and the body slippery, Murphy was unable to keep his grip on the lad and the boy went back into the river.

The police are dragging the river this afternoon for the boy.

CASSIDY FLAYS KU KLUX KLAN

The Ku Klux Klan was flayed as "a menace to constitutional liberty" today by ex-Senator Thomas Cassidy, orator of the day at Mayor Curley's Evacuation Day breakfast at the Copley-Plaza. Mr. Cassidy, in glowing terms, denounced men and organizations that hid behind masks and guns, in their attempts to restrict or stop the exercise of religious liberty.

More than 100 guests attended the breakfast. And, for the first time in history, a woman sat at the head table. Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, occupied a seat at the end of the table. She was given an ovation.

Mayor Curley presided, and during the breakfast a musical program was offered, including "The Wearing of the Green," by Mr. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel; "The River Shannon," by District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, and a special number by Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge.

Mr. Cassidy spoke in high terms of Rev. Edward Horton, chaplain of the Legislature, for his attack on Congress recently, in the course of his opening prayer. "Mr. Horton showed that the spirit of old New England is still alive. He showed that the New England character is still as rugged and ready to do battle in a righteous cause.

"The Constitution gives to all of us the right of freedom of worship. Men or organizations that hide behind masks will try to prevent the free exercise of that right are a menace to the Constitution. Those who hide behind closed doors and plan to usurp government by unlawful means must be driven into the open."

Our Queer Weather
Deep Sea Fishers
Worst of All Hates
St. Patrick's Puzzle

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

A TORNADO in Mississippi, gale blowing seventy-five miles an hour in New York State, a church blown down, many houses under construction demolished.

What ails the weather? How thankful we should be that the wind does not blow 1,000 miles an hour. If that happened everything would be blown down, blown away. Humanity would be swept up like ants in a vacuum sweeper. The few that happened to be down cellar would have us begin all over again.

PRESIDENT HARDING is after deep sea fish in Florida. The deep sea serpents of high finance are after things more profitable all over the country. They never go fishing as a body, individuals rest and fish. The organization keeps on working.

MEN'S CAPACITY for hate does not diminish. Canada reports another Catholic institution burned by incendiaries. The Catholic Home for Incurables at Montreal is the fourteenth Catholic institution thus destroyed in Canada within a year. The loss is one million.

HATRED MIGHT have spared the Home for Incurables. Its inmates had already trouble enough. But of all hatred, religious hate is the worst, most cruel, remorseless, unforgiving. It delights in horrible cruelty, and has cursed humanity through the ages with its burnings and torturings more than all other hates combined.

THE USUAL bad reports from Ireland. Documents discovered in Dublin reveal plans for murder and arson on a gigantic scale. Many houses were listed to be burned, many men to be shot on sight.

New York's great Saint Patrick's Day parade today is to be watched and protected by 550 policemen, to prevent trouble expected there. That would puzzle Saint Patrick. He was a fighting man and often proved it. But he fought with Irishmen, not against them. Once he had persuaded them to believe in the Holy Trinity by showing them the three leaves of the shamrock growing on one stem, and baptized them, every good Irishman was his friend. It would grieve him to find them fighting on his day, killing each other more savagely than they ever killed Englishmen.

A BIG strike threatens the textile industry. Fall River workers demand 15 per cent. pay increase, one hundred and eleven factories will probably shut down.

When coal men, sugar men, or oil men say to the public, "Pay more," the public pays more. When workers say to their employers, "Pay more," the employers shut down, replying, "Think it over while you're out of work."

Perhaps coal, oil and sugar men are better organized than the workers.

THE FRENCH ACADEMY, which rules the French language, has officially embodied the two English words, "gentleman" and "interview" in the French language. The average French pronunciation of those words would delight you. But it's no worse than English pronunciation of French words, which caused Route Du Roi, or "Road of the King," to be pronounced "Rotten Row" by Englishmen.

8 DAYS' BLISS TURNS TO ASHES

MRS. IVA LILLIAN BELL

Married eight days ago to an old sweetheart, Mrs. Bell discovered that her husband has a family in Cleveland. He was arrested and confessed in court. He is Charles Nelson Harris, pictured in inset.

FIRST LOVE OF MRS. BELL A BIGAMIST

The nuptial bliss of Mrs. Iva Lillian Bell, a comely divorcee, turned to aches today.

She stood in Somerville district court and heard debonair Charles Nelson Harris confess he had a wife and children in Cleveland when he wed her.

Mrs. Bell-Harris then announced her intention of seeking an annulment immediately.

"I am done with him," she said. "I want nothing more to do with him. I insist that he be forced to care for his wife and children."

Harris married Mrs. Bell eight days ago in Park avenue M. E. Church, Somerville, near where Mrs. Bell keeps a lodging house. The Rev. George E. Heath, the pastor, performed the ceremony.

For eight days they were in a seventh heaven of happiness, or at least Mrs. Bell was. Then came the cops. Then came his bland confession.

The marriage was the fulfilment of a romance that had its inception some years ago in Cincinnati before Mrs. Bell and Harris were married to their first mates. They corresponded for a long time and then that died.

Harris fled from his family and went to Woburn to obtain employment. A chance acquaintance urged him to room at Mrs. Bell's house. He went there. Mrs. Bell opened the door.

Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant sentenced Harris to six months in East Cambridge Jail for bigamy and placed on file a charge of desertion of his family.

ASKS $10,000 FOR AIDING IN ARREST

A bill to allow William J. Coppell of Boston $10,000 for injuries alleged to have been received while assisting a policeman in making an arrest was filed with the House today by Representative Davis B. Kenniston. Coppell says he responded to an appeal by Patrolman Stephen J. Gillis on May 1, 1919, and in the fracas received a blow in the face from which a cancer developed.

15,000 JAILED OR INTERNED IN IRELAND

Dublin, March 17 (By International News Service.—Within a year the Free State army has increased from 1,000 to 35,000, it was said today by officials.

A year ago the Republican forces were estimated at 80,000, whereas today they are put at 4,000.

There are about 15,000 Republicans interned or arrested who have been taken since last St. Patrick's Day.

SEIZE HEAD OF HUB AUTO GANG

Cash Missing; Bookkeeper Arrested

LEADER OF AUTO GANG ARRESTED

Keffler, Under an Indictment Here for $100,000 Thefts, Taken in New Jersey

John J. Keffler, head of a gang of nation-wide automobile thieves, three members of which are now awaiting trial in Federal courts here, was arrested in Newark, N. J., today by Department of Justice Agent Guy Reeves of Boston.

Keffler's arrest, officials say, rounds up the last of a quartette whose operations in stolen cars in the East amounted to more than $100,000. The trail Federal men have followed in the past three months has led through New England, New York State and New Jersey, then back to Boston and other cities in Massachusetts and back again to New York and New Jersey.

Keffler, Louis Schwartz, John J. Silverman and Abraham Sipert were all indicted by a Federal Grand Jury here on charge of violating the national motor vehicle theft act. The last named three are awaiting trial under $5,000 bonds.

Federal agents say these three concerns were used as clearing houses for the stolen automobiles. The cars were stolen in various parts of New England and brought to Boston, where numbers were changed and the appearance of the machines altered.

When the three agents were arrested Keffler fled. Federal men kept on his trail, however, and clocked up on his movements between here and New York and New Jersey.

Government officials say the conspiracy is one of the largest they have had to deal with. Not only did the members of the gang cover up well on their sales but it is believed they took the precaution of communicating with each other by code signals through radiophones.

EVAN FONTAINE AND MOTHER ARRESTED

New York, March 17.—Evan Burrows Fontaine, Oriental dancer, and her mother, Mrs. Fenonie E. Fontaine, recently indicted by the Rockland County Grand Jury on charges of perjury, were taken to New City, N. Y., by Sheriff Brown of Rockland County today.

"James J. Phelan, State fuel administrator, returned March 15, after an absence of two weeks at Bermuda, where he had gone owing to the illness of a member of his family.

MRS. GOULD WILL RETURN TO STAGE

Paris, March 17.—Mrs. George J. Gould, Jr., will return to the stage. The $10,000 annual allowance from her husband, who was granted a divorce at Nice, will not provide for herself and child. She said:

"I shall be forced to go to work, as the financial settlement is not sufficient."

The president of the Nice Tribunal advises that the Gould application was granted in the husband's favor on the grounds of desertion and incompatibility. The application was filed and approved January 22, but the decree cannot be made final for 65 days thereafter.

SCHWAB SAYS U. S. MEDIATION WANTED

New York, March 17.—Charles M. Schwab, returning today from Europe, said he had found sentiment in favor of an appointment of an international commission to settle the differences between France and Germany. He added that he knew the United States would be welcomed on such a commission and that this country would not be required to join the League of Nations to take a hand in the Ruhr.

TORRENT IN CENTRAL PARK MENACING

New York, March 17.—After a night of fighting at the pumps, 150 weary men were on even terms today with a torrent of water that burst through a rent in a four-foot sewer in Central Park west and undermined the foundation of reconstruction hospital at One Hundredth street. More than half a hundred patients were removed to other institutions without mishap. Residents of adjacent apartments were notified by the police to prepare to get out in a hurry if necessary.

MORE TIME FOR PAPPAS TO LIVE

Time of Execution at Charlestown Prison Has Been Set Ahead

Warden William Hendry of Charlestown State Prison has set back the death clock which steadily ticking away the life of Paul Pappas.

The warden has changed the time for the execution of Pappas for the murder of Mrs. Alice Arsenault, which was set for Tuesday night to a later night in the week.

This is to give the condemned man's counsel, Attorneys James Feeney and John W. Schenck, any possible opportunity to obtain a stay of execution or even a court order for a new trial.

WEEK OF MARCH 18.

Pappas, by the court sentence must be electrocuted some time in the week of Sunday, March 18.

But the time of execution within that week is at the discretion of the prison warden.

He may defer the lethal program to any time prior to midnight of Saturday, March 24.

Pappas himself does not know yet that his execution had been set for next Tuesday night. He knew, of course, when he heard his sentence, that he was to die some time within the week of March 18.

The warden was to go to Pappas tomorrow with instructions to prepare to meet death Tuesday night. Now a later night will be named. The warden will not necessarily tell Pappas that there had been any postponement but may merely announce the deferred death hour just as though no Tuesday night execution had officially been set.

ATTORNEY GRATEFUL.

"This is wonderful."

That was the first grateful comment from Attorney Kenney when the warden's decision was conveyed to him. He added:

"It means just so many more precious hours for counsel to fight for the life of Pappas. I am convinced that Pappas is innocent. I have gone over all the testimony offered at his trial. I am convinced, just as Attorney Schenck, his trial lawyer, is convinced that Paul Pappas never murdered Alice Arsenault."

Under Arrest

FRANK S. AMBROSE.

Bookkeeper of Samuel S. Ambrose, Inc., accused of stealing company's funds.

OLDEST CATHOLIC BISHOP DEAD

St. Joseph, Mo., March 17.—The Right Rev. Maurice F. Burke, seventy-six years old, bishop of St. Joseph diocese and the oldest Catholic bishop in the United States in point of service, died here early today. He had been in failing health three years.

Covington, Ky.—Right Rev. Ferdinand Brossart, bishop of the Covington Catholic diocese, has relinquished his duties, owing to ill-health, and Rev. Joseph A. Flynn, vicar general of the diocese, has been appointed to serve until a successor is named by the Pope.

ACCUSED BY CHEMICAL FIRM

Charged With "Raising" Figures on Vouchers in Milk St. Offices

Frank S. Ambrose, trusted bookkeeper for eight years of Samuel Cabot, Inc., manufacturing chemists at No. 141 Milk street, was arrested today on a charge of stealing his employers' money.

He was specifically accused of larceny of $1,200 by means of raised vouchers. Accountants are going over his books. The police say the deficit may exceed the present charge.

Ambrose is forty-six years old, married, and lives in Chiswick road in the Aberdeen section of Brighton.

The arrest was made by Inspector Frank Haggerty of police headquarters after a week's investigation had been made.

The police say Ambrose has no explanation to offer about money said to be missing.

In the Cabot offices, as in many other business establishments, employes would get vouchers calling for cash orders. Ambrose, according to the police, would take a voucher for $50, for example, raise it to $100, pay out the $50 to the firm presenting it, then take the difference from his office cash and pocket it.

His accounts were kept correctly, the police say, but his cash was wrong.

Curley, cousin of the deceased. The bearers were selected by Mr. Curley several days before his death.

OBERT SLETTEN HUB LAWYER, DISAPPEARS

rowing until he felt himself in almost hopelessly deep.

Finally Sletten, according to his brother-in-law, arranged with a chum back home in Wisconsin to send fake telegrams, calling him to Wisconsin on account of supposed illness of his parents. The telegrams arrived January 22 and 24. Sletten left January 25 and has not been seen since.

Mrs. Sletten, who is with relatives in Quincy with her two children, is frantic for her husband to return. She is sure that their affairs will come all right.

DROPS FROM SIGHT.

Sletten, it is said, lost $2,000 in a ship investment. Then he bought German marks, almost $1,000 worth, and lost again. He dropped $2,500 more in a grain-lining venture.

To repay debts he then borrowed from friends. Finally he told his troubles to his wife, who tried to cheer him up.

When he failed to return Inquiry was written to the parents, who replied that they had not been ill nor had they seen their son.

Mr. Gardner later found among Sletten's papers a letter from the Wisconsin telegram sender which showed that this was all a plot prearranged by Sletten to enable him to leave home.

The blast uttered by Sletten last March about Boston's "hell holes" aroused both American and Scandinavian ire.

One paragraph quoted of Sletten was thus:

"The ultra-fashionable dinner dance is the direct road to hell. Mothers are allowing their sons and daughters to be swept along that path. We are meeting the issue squarely for as to whether the hellholes of Boston are worse than the notorious subject hells of Paris and Germany. If we learn that this city is any more dangerous we will recall our Norwegian students from its examinations."

Late the following July Sletten resigned his vice-consulship. No reason was announced. But there was general belief that the Norwegian consul-general's office at New York believed that Sletten's usefulness as vice-consul at Boston was overhandicapped by his verbal lashing of Boston society.

The Norwegian vice-consulship was given to O. W. Johansen, the Swedish vice-consul, who now holds both posts.

WIFE ILL AND WORRIED.

Sletten's wife, formerly Miss Beatrice Adeline Gardner, whom he married in 1916, is ill at the home of a relative.

The Slettens had been living in Merriam street, Lexington. Since he disappeared it is said that Mrs. Sletten has had to give up the home.

Sletten, a graduate of Harvard Law School, had a desk in room No. 507 No. 73 Tremont street, the Tremont building. Other lawyers and some real estate men, mainly Scandinavians have desks there.

Among these is W. G. Rice, attorney; Ferdinand E. Love, Boston representative of the Worcester Swedish newspaper Svea, and Harry Hubbard, real estate dealer.

SEEK RETURN OF LOANS.

According to tenants of the office persons have called looking for Sletten. These persons complained that Sletten had borrowed money from them. It is estimated Sletten's borrowings may reach $15,000.

His wife graduated from Radcliffe in 1912; then took a course at Simmons College of Domestic Science, 14. The wedding of the couple was attended by many Radcliffe and Harvard graduates.

Deserted Wife Bitterly Denounces, Sletten

Mrs. Obert Sletten, in strict seclusion with her two little sons, six and four and a half years old, is bitter towards her husband, because of his disappearance. She said today:

"He felt he could not face his financial obligations, yet he was cowardly enough to leave me and my children to face them.

The attractive twenty-seven-year-old wife of the ex-vice-consul of Norway has done everything possible to keep her plight unknown to her friends and neighbors. The palatial house on Marion road, Lexington, is closed, and is for sale.

"I feel it is a deep disgrace upon me and my children," she said. "I have prayed that no one would find it out until my husband asserted enough manhood to return and take up his responsibilities again. I cannot believe he is dead. I feel he is simply hiding and letting us face all the trouble."

DEATH THREAT FOR RUM PROSECUTOR

Indianapolis, Ind., March 17.—(By International News Service)—Warning that unless he dropped the case he "would get the same medicine Monte got" which was death—has been received by Homer Elliott, United States district attorney prosecuting in the Federal Court the big Gary alleged liquor conspiracy.

The Monte referred to is Pete Monte, star government witness, who was mysteriously killed the day before the trial began.

The "death note" was typewritten. It bore the signature of "M. Mool," the last few letters being unintelligible. It was postmarked Chicago.

The prosecutor said he was "not worrying"—that he would proceed with the case as if no communication had been received.

Ocean Is Mrs. Larz Anderson's Hobby, Declares Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON has rather an extensive hobby—the ocean.

She and Mr. Anderson have spent many moons on board their houseboat, the "Roxona." They've anchored for a whole Summer at a time off the shores of Beverly or Marblehead, and they've taken their boat for cruises in the balmy waters of the Florida coast. And any one must be pretty fond of the ocean to do that.

It's simple enough to see how the clever author of "Presidents and Pies"—she's written other books too—is fascinated by the briny deep.

In the first place, her grandfather, who was a Weld owned a lot of clipper ships, amassing thereby a considerable fortune. It is after him, by the way, that "Weld," the Anderson's wonderful place in Brookline, is named.

All the ships of Grandfather Weld's fleet had for their insignia a red flag with the black flying horse, and it is this same symbol which the Andersons fly on their boat.

Certainly the sea played a very large part in the life of Mrs. Anderson's father, the late George Hamilton Perkins. The latter got his commission at Annapolis, and during the Civil War he fought with Farragut in the Battle of Mobile Bay. He was commander of the "Chickasaw" which captured the rebel ram "The Tennessee." Two statutes have been erected in his memory, one in Concord and another in Annapolis. A younger brother, Hamilton Perkins, was also at Annapolis, but was too young to get into the war until shortly before the close.

THE Andersons arrived recently at their Washington home after a few week's sojourn at Bermuda. The one-time ambassador to Japan and his lovely wife will probably remain at the capital until very late into the Spring, though Mrs. Anderson will doubtless pay brief visits to Boston to see her mother, Mrs. George Hamilton Perkins of Commonwealth avenue, who has not been in the very best of health this Winter.

Last year, I believe, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson didn't open their Washington house at all, spending most of the year abroad, followed by a long Summer and Fall at "Weld," their Brookline place. Invitations to any affairs given by the Andersons at the capital are always accepted with little hesitation, for they are delightful hosts.

Mrs. Anderson is a small woman, with dark brown hair and rather twinkly brown eyes. She is always gowned with the utmost simplicity and has a distinctly quiet manner. Yet she is easily one of society's most interesting figures and has written several interesting books dealing with the diplomatic life both here and in Japan.

The other day Mr. and Mrs. Anderson gave a dinner for twenty in honor of Prince Andrew and Princess Alice, upon whom a perfect avalanche of entertaining has fallen, and who left the capital shortly afterwards to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Charles L. Harding, one of the most prominent members of the Boston colony at Palm Beach, has returned to that resort from a flying trip to New York. She gave a dinner at Palm Beach the other evening for her house guests, Mrs. Thomas B. Symington and Mrs. Robert Grosvenor, taking her guests on to a dinner-dance at the Everglades Club.

STANDARD BASE ON NEW WD-12 RADIO TUBES

The shortage of WD-11 tubes is due to a sudden and unexpected demand on the part of radio buyers, according to a statement by G. Y. Allen, radio engineer, of the Westinghouse company.

According to Mr. Allen, 100,000 of the tubes were in stock at the beginning of the radio season last year. This amount was believed to be adequate for any demand.

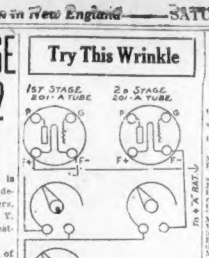
It was not enough, however, and although production has been crowded to five or six times as many per day as prior to January 1, the demand is still in excess of the supply. Mr. Allen does not state where the tubes brought out by this increased production have been going lately but says that the manufacturers have great hops that everybody will be supplied within the next thirty days.

A new tube, the WD-12, will be out shortly. This tube is like the WD-11, except that it is provided with a standard base so that it can be used in the regular six-volt sockets without an adapter.

AMRAD TO REMAIN SILENT ON FRIDAYS

The radiophone broadcasting station, W. G. L., at Medford Hillside, operated by the American Radio & Research Corporation, will remain silent Friday nights, in addition to Monday nights, according to Friday, April 6. This action was taken in the hope that each station in the country will follow suit and thus lessen the interference which has led to many complaints from radio fans.

Try This Wrinkle



RAISES RESISTANCE.

If you find that the rheostats already on your set are not of sufficient resistance for use with the new UV 201 A tubes, try this fan's stunt. He simply placed another rheostat, set at a rough adjustment, in the cabinet, connected as shown, and did fine adjustment by the old rheostats. The extra rheostat should be of low resistance. 18 KILLED, 100 HURT, IN MISSISSIPPI STORM

Memphis, Tenn., March 17.—The death list from the storm in western Mississippi grew to eighteen today. The injured numbered a hundred or more and damage in seven counties swept by a tornado was estimated at $500,000. Nearly a thousand persons were made homeless and the Red Cross and other agencies of relief hurried tents and other necessaries into the devastated districts. Eleven of those killed were negroes who had lived on plantations.

RHINE ARMY NOTE APPROVED

Miami Beach, Fla., March 17.—President Harding has approved the note drafted in Washington by Secretary of State Hughes, flatly rejecting the plea of the allied governments for a reduction of the $2$5,600,000 bill due the United States for the maintenance of the American army of occupation in Germany.

At the President's direction, Secretary Hughes was instructed to proceed in the Rhineland financial negotiations on the basis of the policy decided upon by the administration several months ago.

Paris, March 17—(By the Associated Press)—Premier Poincare will entertain no propositions for negotiation with Germany until the Berlin government makes it known directly and officially to France that she wants to negotiate, it was declared today in French official circles.

PLAN ENDING OF INTERCOASTAL RATE WAR

Plans are now being formulated which are expected to effect an end, within a week, to the rate war which has been prevailing in the intercoastal trade. Details will not be made public until final agreement has been reached, but it is understood that the agreement, as now planned, calls for an increase in rates from 20 to 30 per cent. after June 30.

Fourteen steamship lines were represented at the conference which have been held during the week to consider the report of the special committee which has been drafting a plan. All of the companies in the Intercoastal trade have been represented except the Isthmian Line, which is said to have delegated the Argonaut Line unofficially to act as its spokesman.

Officials at the meeting are reported to have declared that, while not more than a third of the report was discussed, and several important features remain to be considered, it is expected that, barring some unexpected difficulty, restoration of the conference will be accomplished by the middle of the coming week.

The companies are anxious to bring the question to a decision, as most of them have contracts running until June 30 and are ready to make commitments for the next season.

The central features of the committee report are the giving of a cash forfeit, probably around $25,000, by each line to guarantee the maintenance of conference rates, an increase in rates after June 30, and administrative provisions similar to those adopted by the North Atlantic, Far East and the Pacific Westbound conferences. Details will not be made public until final agreement has been reached.

One of the first actions of the reestablished conference, if this is concluded successfully, will be an increase in rates, which have fallen to one-half or one-third of the figures prevailing before the collapse last June. It is expected that the advance will be gradual, to avoid disturbance in the trade. The initial raise, it is understood, will be 20 to 30 per cent.

BUTTER 6,500 MARKS A POUND IN BERLIN

Berlin, March 17 (By the Associated Press).—Pocket butter boxes are again popular with restaurant patrons. Butter costs 6,500 marks a pound, beyond reach of most persons. It is no longer served by restaurants, as they are endeavoring to avoid the criticism that they are forcing up prices by serving luxuries to wealthy persons, to the detriment of the less well-to-do.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR CONNOR UNCHANGED

Conditions surrounding negotiations of Jones Brothers Tea Company for purchase of John T. Connor Company stores, announced to readers of the Boston American several weeks ago, are unchanged, Connor management, as soon as offer is made that means [illegible] approval will submit terms to shareholders for action.

Building Records Continue to Show Gains

An increase of $680,100 in the amount of contracts awarded in New England during the week ending March 13, is reported by the F. W. Dodge Company. The total for the week is $4,854,700, as compared with $3,974,100 for the corresponding period a year ago, and is over $1,620,000 more than for the same period in 1921.

Only twice in 1920, when the value of contracts awarded reached $16,200,000, and in 1918, when the total was $11,571,000, have the past week's figures been exceeded during the twenty-three years for which records are available.

PETTICOATS AGAIN WILL RUSTLE

The humble petticoat has come into its own again in milady's wardrobe, according to latest fashion's decree.

Knickers are doomed.

Corsets have passed away, never to return again. The corsets of the future will be displayed in museum cases, according to style authorities.

But petticoats will enjoy a flourishing reign during the coming months. Taffetas, flounces, laces and frills will hold sway, and the petticoats that have been relegated to the attic trunks for the last year or so, will come to the centre of the stage and make a rustling bow. Hoop-skirts may even come in again, say fashion dictators.

WATCH EFFECT OF CHICAGO AGREEMENT

Building interests are wondering what effect, if any, will be had on the local building trades' agitation for increased wages effective April 1, by the action of the brick layers and five other unions in Chicago in signing a year's contract, beginning May 1 at the old rate of $1.25 an hour, instead of $1.50 an hour as demanded.

Under the new agreement no restrictions are made against the use of labor-saving materials or devices, and the brick layers have agreed, also, not to strike because of the use of non-union labor in their own or any other trade. This is forced except to remedy conditions that endanger life, or are adjudged of vital necessity. The employers, for their part, have agreed not to advertise for more men than are required.

Some of the less skilled unions are negotiating contracts for $1.02½ cents an hour. Plasterers, who have been receiving $1.10 an hour, will receive $1.35 an hour, according to the new scale. The scarcity of plasterers, however, has compelled contractors to pay a bonus, in some cases as high as $10 a day, and it is expected that despite the higher scale the bonus system will probably be continued.

TWO MORE GERMANS ARE SLAIN BY FRENCH SENTINELS IN RUHR

SPREAD OF SABOTAGE CHARGED

Invaders Declare Teutons Are Directed in Violence by Orders From Berlin

Mayence, March 17 (By the Associated Press).—A young German woman shopping in an army canteen here was accidentally killed today by a bullet in the breast from the revolver of a soldier, who, it is stated, was toying with the weapon when it was accidentally discharged.

Dusseldorf, March 17 (by the Associated Press).—Two Germans were shot and killed by French sentinels during the night—one at Recklinghausen and the other at Essen.

Three Germans who were arrested were said by the French to have been caught cutting telephone and telegraph wires which they declared they were doing under the orders of their chief, who had instructed them to commit systematic sabotage.

Their chief, when arrested at Duesseldorf, is declared by the authorities to have said he was merely carrying out instructions from Berlin.

Essen, March 17 (By the Associated Press).—The French today began loading trainloads of coke from the Concordia mine at Oberhausen, where 30,000 tons of coke were seized. This mine is owned by mixed French and German capital, the majority interest being French.

The German director of the mine, however, refused to pay the 40 per cent. tax due on Thursday, and the French action is directed against the German interests in the company.

The 50,000 miners employed in the mine immediately went on strike in protest against the French occupation, but another 20,000 employed in adjacent mines remain at work.

Germany Flatly Denies New Peace Proposals

Berlin, March 17 (By the Associated Press).—The rumor that Germany has offered 40,000,000,000 gold marks or any other fixed sum or has submitted fresh reparations proposals through an intermediary channel was flatly denied by the German foreign office today.

In the first place, it is pointed out, such a sum is considerably in excess of the amount provided for in the government's proposals of last January, and therefore is declared to be out of the question, in view of the disturbed economic situation resulting from the occupation of the Ruhr.

In addition, it is stated in official quarters, the Ruhr situation, in the present impasse, does not permit new and definite proposals to be contemplated, especially as the character of the negotiations which would obviously precede an active resumption of the reparations discussions has not yet been indicated nor have such negotiations even been suggested as a possible early eventuality.

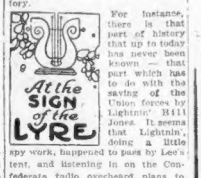
Germans in Belgian Area on "Thirst Strike"

Duisberg, March 17 (By the Associated Press).—The Germans in Duisburg and elsewhere in the Belgian occupied area have gone on a thirst strike. This is due to the adoption by the Belgians of the rule, "no tax, no wine," as a method of inducing payment of the recently-imposed tax on wines, liquors and tobacco.

The Germans are refusing to pay the tax and the Belgians are seizing, locking up and guarding the wine cellars.

Lightnin' Bill Lies Self Into Contest With a Humdinger

The Liars' Contest is making history.



For instance, there is that part of history that up to today has never been known — that part which has to do with the saving of the Union forces by Lightnin' Bill Jones. It seems that Lightnin', doing a little spy work, happened to pass by Lee's tent, and listening in on the Confederate radio overheard plans to surround Grant. He sneaked away, called up Grant on the long distance telephone and thus made it possible for people in Philadelphia to shoot letter carriers today under the impression they are Confederate soldiers.

However, to get back from the sublime to the ridiculous, the best lie ever heard by Ben Blaze, No. 43 Wenonah street, Roxbury, is the one he hears every day on the Boston Elevated when the guard yells:

"Move up forward, plenty of room in front!"

"I'll never forget the time I found a sick snake and took it home with me and nursed it back to health. The dear little rattler grew so fond of me after it got well that it used to coil up at the foot of the bed and sleep there nights. One night I was awakened by a noise and turning on the lights I found the snake with its body coiled around a burglar and its tail out of the window, rattling for a cop."

John B. Daniels of No. 2 Friendship street, Newport, R. I., is guilty of the above, which is, however, quite a mild whopper when compared to this one sent in by Private Fergus Maguire of Co. L, 13th Infantry, Fort Andrews, Mass.:

"I was out deer-hunting with only one bullet left. Suddenly I espied two deer coming toward me. Directly in their path was an old tree stump. I at once thought of a scheme to get both deer with one shot. I drove my hunting knife into the stump and fired. The bullet was split into two by the knife, and both deer were killed. Anybody who doubts this story get in touch with me. I can show them the stump, the gun I shot with, the knife and even the moose. Did I say deer? It was moose—bull moose."

"I think the grandest white lie ever told," writes Sara G. Talbert of No. 5 Braemore road, Brookline, "is the one which has to do with Santa Claus. It has made millions happy."

A pair of ducats to "Lightnin'" awaits the authors of the lies printed today. At the end of the contest a ten dollar gold piece will be awarded to the writer of the best White Lie, another to the author of the best Black Lie and a third to the perpetrator of the funniest lie.

A word to all the liars still to be heard from: Our space is not as extended as we wish it were, and one of the things we ask is brevity.

Address all lies to Liars' Contest Editor, Boston American, No. 59 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

ARMY PLANES REACH SANTO DOMINGO

Santo Domingo, March 17 (By Associated Press).—The U. S. United States army airplanes, engaged in a test flight from San Antonio to Porto Rico, arrived here today from Port-au-Prince, Haiti. The first plane arrived at 9:23 o'clock. The squadron was escorted from Port-au-Prince by three Marine Corps planes.

THREATS CAUSE PRECAUTIONS IN N. Y. PARADE

New York, March 17.—Two hundred and fifty city detectives, in plain clothes, and several hundred uniformed patrolmen were detailed today to mingle with Fifth avenue crowds during the annual St. Patrick's Day parade.

A delegation claiming to represent the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic called on Mayor Hylan Thursday, warning him that there would be trouble if the parade was held. The organization sent the Mayor a letter repudiating the action of the delegation.

Late yesterday three men drove up to City Hall in a motor. One of them was masked. They sent a letter to the Mayor again warning of "trouble" if the parade was held.

Major Michael A. Kelly of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, who wrote to Mayor Hyland, said in his letter:

"The organization supporting the Irish Republic will take no part in any celebrations or dinners; they will observe the day as one of mourning for the sixty-seven Irish patriots who have been executed by the English-Free State agents, and will hold a memorial meeting Sunday night to commemorate their sacrifice."

Lima, Peru (By Associated Press).—The American delegation to the Pan-American Congress at Santiago, Chile, via Callao tonight, has received invitations to attend a full fight here Sunday afternoon.

GIRL TERRIFIED BY "GHOST" IN SOUTH BOSTON

There is a limit to all things, including sufferers of ghosts, and Thomas Rosati, of No. 163 West Ninth street, South Boston, has reached his.

An inoffensive ghost which confines its activities to harmless knockings and rumblings is all right, but when it leaps from bed at his fourteen-year-old daughter and fires shots that leave no marks, something must be done.

Rosati called in the police, who searched the house without success, and now he is sending out a broadcast for the American Society of Psychical Research.

"I wanna tol you," said Rosati, piteously, "it's too much. Something is got to be done. Me, I cannot stand it no longer. My familia 'as gotta da cruze. You know? Nuts? Sure."

The ghost first made itself apparent a few weeks ago, by strange knockings in the cellar. A few days later noises were heard outside the kitchen window. No one was in sight but the window was seen to raise slowly.

But the crowning overt act, occurred when fourteen-year-old Mary Rosati was hanging the numerous smaller Rosatis in bed. An apparition leaped at her, from the bed. Mary fled screaming. While she was on her way, touching every sixth step lightly, a shot rang out behind her. Neighbors called the police. They found nothing. Not even a bullet hole.

"Wat you tink?" asked Thomas.

SEXTON WOULD TAKE SLAUGHTERING JOB

A resident of a western county town, having acted as "sexton for three cemeteries, besides filling other minor offices," has applied for the job of slaughtering inspector. In his application for the job to the State Board of Health he wrote:

"I have lived in this town thirty-eight years and have dealt in stock, such as cows, horses, hogs, calves, sheep, etc. Am at present sexton of three cemeteries. Not a drinking man, but not in favor of prohibition."

START GERMAN LOAN HERE FOR 50 MILLIONS

New York, March 17.—Farson, Son & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, today announced they were receiving subscriptions in the United States for a $50,000,000 issue of German government non-interest bearing treasury certificates at par, to yield approximately 8 per cent.

The certificates, guaranteed by the German Reichsbank, are payable in United States dollars April 15, 1926, at 120 per cent. of par.

A representative of Farson & Co. explained the issue is a new German government temporary internal loan, being floated in Germany to aid in stabilization of the mark.

In offering certificates to American investors, the brokers said, are acting under authority received from one of the large German banks, a member of the German banking syndicate underwriting the loan.

The State Department at Washington, in response to an inquiry, has notified the brokers, they said, that there would be no objection by the American government to the sale of the certificates in this market.

Subscriptions are being received, subject to allotment, until noon, March 23. The certificates are in denominations of $100.

MATINEE IDOL NO LONGER HOLDS THE STAGE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THESE are hard days for the matinee idol! Once he trod a primrose path, carpeted with scented mash notes and coy invitations to scribble sentimental smush across the front of his favorite photograph. That was the way it used to be—today a matinee idol is lucky to find a theatre where he can present his wares. Straight legs and heavy eyelashes no longer set up arterial disturbances in the feminine system. 'Tis bitter news, but true, and you have the highest authority in the world for backing—Mr. William Courtenay, for many seasons champion of his class and hero of a hundred conquests.

MATINEE IDOL IS PRACTICALLY EXTINCT

IF these are perilous times for the matinee idol as a whole, please shed an extra tear for Mr. Courtenay, who is lamenting the fate that sent him back to Boston and dropped him out in Castle Square, where popular idols of the drama have not been doing much idolling for these many years. But Courtenay is a philosopher as well as an actor—he admitted as much when I flashed the question. "This is a wonderful theatre," he began; "comfortable for the player because of its perfect acoustics, unexcelled in its stage equipment, and it has an enormous seating capacity. All that keeps the Arlington from being the finest playhouse in Boston is about three city blocks. Naturally, I was disappointed at not being able to take 'Her Temporary Husband' into one of the downtown theatres, but contracts cannot be carelessly broken, and our farce is too good to have Boston scratched from the tour. What real difference does it make, anyway? A play worth seeing at all is exactly as entertaining in one theatre as in another, and the Arlington is not exactly suburban, though dangerously near it. We may lack some of the Boylston street glamor in this corner of the town; our electric signs are perhaps not quite so brilliant, but we have darned good street lights and you don't have to risk your life battling with automobile traffic. I can see many fine advantages in this little excursion into the country. And please don't overlook one important item—I may be practicing my profession in the South End, but I have very lovely quarters at the Touraine."

The matinee idol is practically extinct," says Mr. Courtenay.

FLUTTERING HEARTS NOW FOR WOMEN ONLY

LET'S get back to the matinee idol. You could be sure Billy Courtenay would know something interesting about that branch of the trade, for he had been plying his arts too long not to have viewed it in keen perspective. The idol of yesterday may be slipping, but one substantial fact will hold your attention—Courtenay has not yet been sent down to the minors as a stage lover. He is still in the big league and batting well over three hundred. "The matinee idol," he remarked, "is almost extinct—not wholly, but almost—and you cannot place all the responsibility for the slump on moving pictures, although a number of well-known screen stars are having quite a fling at this personal following thing. It's the women who have ruined us—women of the stage. They have unloosened the grip of the former matinee idol on the fluttering feminine heart that formerly beat its own sweet song when Jack Barrymore or Harry Warner came into view. It might just as well be frankly admitted, the girls have deserted us—left us flat. But they still have their stage idols—and they're women, girls like themselves. If you don't believe this, just check up on the matinees where Jane Cowl or Ethel Barrymore or Lenora Ulrich are playing. It's tough, but it's true. The Cowls and the Ethel Barrymores have stripped the former masculine matinee idol of all his glory."

MR. COURTENAY ran a brush over the waving locks that have thrilled so many silly young things. "It doesn't seem to get 'em any more," he went on. "The slender legs and white teeth that did so much damage a few seasons ago do not even start a ripple of emotion. Of course, plays have changed a lot in five years, and authors are not creating the same type of sloppy heroes that glutted the theatre when the matinee idol was at his best. The stage favorite of yesterday that caught the feminine fancy was looked upon by the average man as being a fair subject for the firing squad at sunrise. What the girls raved over, the men sneered at. And, of course, the men were right. It was the author, however, not the actor, who manufactured the matinee idol. The actor may have developed the specie, but it was the author who started him away on his heart-wrecking career."

EVEN MEN OF THE SCREEN ARE DESERTED

LET the expert proceed with his testimony. "It's exactly the same with screen favorites. A lot of mushy lovers were written into photoplays and almost immediately screen idols were developed, and originally the men carried off all the honors. Can you ever forget Francis Bushman, King Baggot and a string of others? Like the stage idol, his brother on the screen had to finally give way to the women, and we had Theda Bara, Elsie Ferguson and later the Talmadge girls, Marion Davies and others. Of course, there have always been exceptions to rule and the conflict of idols, stage and celluloid, has developed its own surprises. However, a general survey of the entire field will reveal women as the real matinee idols, with the men struggling to save something from the wreck."

IT sounds convincing, but there was one small atom of doubt. "What about Valentino?" you ventured timidly. "He doesn't appear to be floundering about in the wreckage of disappearing popularity."

"VALENTINO," answered Mr. Courtenay, "is one of the principal exceptions to the rule. Anyway, he should be barred from all popularity contests in interest of good sport. You've got to scratch Valentino if the rest of us are to have a gambler's chance. I still insist, however, that women have quite an edge on the men, and they will hold the advantage until the drama moves into a new cycle and gives us back the old swashbuckling play with its strutting hero of handsome legs and an innocent eye. Those were the happy days for the matinee idol. Can you imagine any pretty-faced lady of the stage, no matter how talented, who could rob James K. Hackett of his girlish rosebud admirers when he swept before the footlights in 'The Prisoner of Zenda'? We'll both tell the world there isn't that much imagination within the reach of the human mind. But don't be too free with your pity for the fallen idol, for, although he may have lost some of the blind devotion of women that has heretofore set him apart from other men, he is today a better actor, playing more sensible parts. Save your tears—the upset idol isn't flattened as much as you may imagine."

UPON which declaration Mr. Courtenay left you abruptly to resume professional love-making before an audience. "Isn't he tall and handsome," we heard a young woman in the theatre whisper to her escort. "Maybe," grunted the young man, "but he does seem to run pretty much to legs—long, thin ones." Which may be taken as a fair sign that human beauty is largely a point of view.

You Can't Stop Jack Hazzard's Muse on Mabel

John E. Hazzard, one of the leading spirits of The "Greenwich Village Follies," gained his first fame as a writer by producing a verse entitled, "Ain't It Awful, Mabel?" Just to show that the old muse still works, Mr. Hazzard dashed off the following companion piece the other day:

IT AIN'T SO AWFUL, MABEL.

Dear Mabel, well, I'm in again,
In my fair hand I take my pen,
To gab about business—I've a "yen."
It ain't so awful, Mabel.
I quit the chorus long ago
(To my chauffeur that was a blow),
I'm playing parts and getting dough,
So it ain't so awful, Mabel.

Greenwich Village Follies at the Shubert. (Second week.) One of those gorgeous girlie shows, with constantly changing scenes and sensational features. Too brilliant to be described in four lines.

—o— —o— —o—

Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool" at the Colonial. (Seventh week.) The funniest man on the stage in a three-hour parade of monologues that is sure death to dull care and solemn thoughts.

Walter Gilbert Says He's Happy for Once

"The William Vaughn Moody play, 'The Great Divide,' has always appealed to me," said Walter Gilbert, leading man of the Boston Stock Company, "but in my few years in stock, I have never had an opportunity to play it, consequently I am quite a little pleased that my introduction to this much-talked of drama will be via the Henry Miller role. This will be a striking departure from the ordinary run of roles I have had in my seventy-four weeks at the St. James. People frequently ask me if I get tired of having to learn such long parts each week. Quite naturally I do, in the same way that millions of other people who work in offices or at professions get tired of what they have to do, for it is only human nature to detest, at times the things we are required to accomplish. However, the relief from the monotony of long parts is having a role like the one I will play this week, no dress suits, uncomfortable collars or cuffs, no dressed-up dialogue, just a plain soft shirt, open-aired drama, played by natural human beings and containing purely situations that actors and audience like."

Ambitious Song Birds in Loew's "Pinafore"

During the past week Manager Joseph H. Brennan of Loew's State Theatre received an unusually large number of applications from young men and women who expressed willingness to participate in the Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta, "Pinafore." This tuneful and comic opera will be staged in a condensed version at the State Theatre the week of April 16. The production will be staged under the supervision of Victor Hyde, already known to Boston theatre goers for his remarkable success with the recent Loew's Orpheum Frolics. The company will be made up of local talent.

Good Story If You Can Believe the Press Agent

Edna Terry, one of the many pretty dancers with Ed Wynn, "The Perfect Fool," in his new musical success at the Colonial, hails from Harrison, N. J. When not yet out of her teens, Miss Terry joined a musical comedy stock company which for three years played the larger cities of the South.

Always an admirer of dumb animals of every description, Miss Terry left behind her many pets, including a large flock of carefully bred chickens, and, above all, her cote of homing pigeons.

For the first few days, the novelty of the change appealed to her, but, as time wore on and the novelty began to wear off, she became lonely. Then she had a bright idea. "I'll have my brother Bob send me fourteen of the birds every week, and I will send letters home every day by carrier pigeons," she told herself.

"I'll hunt up some nice man who owns some homing birds in New Orleans, and ask him to lend me some. I can send fourteen home every week, and my letters can fly back to me."

Thus it was that the first aerial mail service was started by a lonely girl.

Annual Filene Show in the Tremont Theatre

The annual musical comedy production given by the Filene Cooperative Association will be presented this year at the Tremont Theatre for one week beginning Easter Monday, April 2. The title of the piece is "Jerry," with music by R. L. Harlow, book by L. W. Libby and R. L. Harlow, and lyrics by L. S. Bitner. As in previous productions the cast will be assembled from workers in the Filene store.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

TREMONT—"The Torch Bearers," a comedy by George Kelly that gives satirical treatment to the amateur actor and the little theatre movement. The play has already held the stage in New York for five months and comes to the Tremont following a month in Chicago. The leading players are Mary Boland, Alison Skipworth, Helen Lowell, Douglas Gordon and Edward Reese.

—o— —o— —o—

MAJESTIC—"Spice of 1923," a musical show of broad dimensions, with a company of one hundred people and such vaudeville headliners as El Brendel, Flo Bert, Arman Kiliz, Sam Hearn, George Anderson, Florence Browne and a dozen others. Jack Lait wrote the book and music, and the music came from many sources. According to announcements, the piece has American speed and French atmosphere.

—o— —o— —o—

B. F. KEITH'S—(Vaudeville)—Irene Franklin in program of songs, assisted by Jerry Jarnagan. Other features will be Gordon Dooley and Martha Morton, Mabel Ford, a dainty danseuse, Crawford and Broderick, comedians; Tom Douglas and Francis X. Bushman, Jr., in "When Love Is Young"; Rae Eleanor Ball, the Browne sisters, Valentine and Bell and Rekoma, an equilibrist.

—o— —o— —o—

ST. JAMES—"The Great Divide," William Vaughn Moody's play that served Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin with much profit more than a decade ago, has been called America's greatest play by many critics. The leading roles at the St. James will be played by Walter Gilbert and Adelyn Bushnell.

—o— —o— —o—

SOMERVILLE—"The Fascinating Widow," featuring Tommie Martelle, who will appear in the role first played by Julian Eltinge. This is Martelle's second appearance with the Somerville company this season.

MOSCOW ART WILL BE MAY ARRIVAL

Arrangements have been completed by Morris Gest for the two weeks' engagement of the Moscow Art Theatre company at the Majestic Theatre, beginning Monday May 7. It provides for this unusual attraction making its appearance at a downtown theatre instead of the Boston Opera House as originally announced. In order to play their engagement at the Majestic Theatre the Boston engagement had to be postponed to May 2. Also the Majestic engagement makes it possible to extend the Boston stay to two weeks.

The repertoire now determined upon is as follows: Tolstoy's "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch," Monday evening May 7; Tuesday matinee and evening, May 8; Wednesday evening May 9, and Thursday matinee and evening May 10; Gorky's "The Lower Depths," Friday evening, May 11; Saturday matinee and evening May 12; Monday evening, May 14, and Tuesday matinee and evening, May 15; Anton Tchekhoff's "The Cherry Orchard," Wednesday evening, May 16, and Thursday matinee and evening, May 17; Tchekhoff's "The Three Sisters," Friday evening, May 18, and Saturday matinee and evening, May 19.

Slap-Stick Comedy Road to Art

Those wishing to become screen actors and actresses should pay strict attention to pantomimic comedy, according to Monte Blue, th debonaire lead ing man of the movies, now be ing seen in "Brass" at the Park.

"Comedy train ing, I am firmly convinced, is the great teacher of screen acting technique to day," he says. "the beginner can have no bet ter school. The reason is that in order to get over their points, the actors in comedy must make them clear. A person who has spent years in slapstick comedy can go into a picture, always confident of making what is known as 'business' with economy and sureness.

"Take the case of Mary Prevost, who plays opposite me in 'Brass.' Miss Prevost got her apprenticeship in Keystone comedy; she was taught to 'register' quickly, and to be unconscious of the camera. That is why every little motion of hers is worth studying and emulating.

"If I were starting all over again I would study someone who has had slapstick experience and graduated into the more serious lines."

Monte Blue

Erika Morini, the young woman violinist, will play in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 25.

Scene from "ADAM'S RIB" at LOEW'S STATE.
MONTE BLUE and MARIE PREVOST in "BRASS" at the PARK.
Scene from "YOUR FRIEND AND MINE" LOEW'S ORPHEUM.

Coming Plays

John E. Hazzard's successful play, "Turn to the Right," will be the attraction at the St. James for the week beginning Monday, April 2.

* * *

"The Merry Widow," revived for the present season by Henry W. Savage, will occupy the stage at the Colonial on Monday, April 2.

Rose's Royal Midgets have been booked for a week's engagement at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, beginning Monday, March 26.

"The Passion Play" will be offered as a Lenten photo-drama at Tremont Temple for the week beginning Monday, March 26.

* * *

Helen Hayes in "To the Ladies" will come to the Wilbur for an indefinite engagement beginning Monday, April 2. This comedy is by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, authors of "Merton of the Movies."

Actress Makes Broad Theatrical Jump

It is a far cry from stepping off a boat from England and two hours later singing Marie Tempest's role of "The Nightingale," without a rehearsal, to that of characterizing Mrs. J. Duro Pampinelli in George Kelly's comedy, "The Torchbearers," which comes to the Tremont Theatre on Monday, yet that is the artistic running broad jump which has won the championship for Alison Skipworth.

Miss Skipworth is a stunning and commanding figure; her very imposingness overawes the audiences; she gets across the footlights the fact that she is a born commander and her portrayal wins unstinted admiration.

Leona Earl

The production is a snappy musical burlesque with twenty sing ing and dancing girls in the chorus.

New Ball Square Theatre Near Completion

Work on Locatelli's Ball Square Theatre is nearly completed and in all probability this new playhouse will be thrown open to the public on Monday evening, April 2. The Ball Square will mark the second theatre of anticipated chain of Locatelli theatres that is in the making. The theatre is located in the residential section of Somerville, being close to the Medford line. It will have a seating capacity of 1,400. A large organ will be one of the features.

Adam Had His Troubles, So Did Eve

It is said that the original "Adam's Rib" caused a lot of trouble in the "Garden of Eden." Well, whatever trouble Eve may have caused is more than atoned for by Mathilda Ramsey, another product of "Adam's Rib," in a new Cecil B. De Mille production by that name, which will be shown at Loew's State Theatre the coming week, and which features Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pauline Garon and Julie Faye. "Adam's Rib" is not a story of the Garden of Eden, although Mr. De Mille does include a few cave men scenes as a "vision."

AT THE BURLESQUE HOUSES

GAYETY THEATRE

"Step Lively Girls" will make this week a merry one at the Gayety Theatre. George P. (Hot Dawg) Murphy, the comedian whose use and mis-use of the English language are famous laughgetters, is star of the cast, with George Douglas as his chief aid. Sadie Banks, comedienne, recently graduated from the Yiddish stage, is featured on the feminine side of the company.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Two big burlesque shows in one. That's what they announce for Waldron's Casino next week. In the first place, "The Greenwich Village Revue" is there with Tom Senna, Jay Read and other clever principals and a beauty chorus. In the next place, "The Dancing Demons," described as the fastest colored troupe before the public today, are specially featured. In addition there will be vaudeville and moving pictures, a three-in-one continuous performance.

The principals supporting Senna and Reed in "The Greenwich Village Revue" include Miss Tenny Hilson, Margaret White, Gertrude Webber, Ward and Bohlman and others equally entertaining.

The production is a pretentious one in two big acts and eight magnificent scenes. There are twenty musical interludes of the popular variety and any number of unique and graceful dances characterized by "pep" and ginger.

"Lightnin'" Facing Week of Gay Celebrations

"Lightnin'" is approaching a period of celebrations that will place a three-fold stamp of popularity and achievement upon the play. With the coming week this interesting drama of home folk will attain its thirteenth week at the Hollis, which establishes a new record for consecutive playing at that house, the longest previous run having been gained by Helen Hayes in "Bab," which checked up twelve weeks. Previous to that engagement the record at the Hollis had been held for twenty-three years by Maude Adams, who, back in 1895, gave sixty-four performances of Lady Babbie in "The Little Minister."

John Golden, who produced "Lightnin'"

The first step in the week's celebrations will come next Tuesday, when "Lightnin'" will reach its 100th consecutive performance at the Hollis, and on Thursday night the company will celebrate its 2000th performance in this tears-and-laughter classic.

There have been other plays in this country that have seen long periods of service, several of which were performed for more than 2,000 times, but not consecutively, notably David Warfield in "The Music Master," and William Hodge in "The Man From Home." But for uninterrupted playing, continuing Winter and Summer, with a single hiatus of three days occasioned by the death of Frank Bacon in Chicago, "Lightnin'" has more continuous performances to its credit than any play that has ever graced the American stage.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

Richard Burgin, concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear as soloist at the next pair of concerts to be given at Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. He will be heard in Beethoven's famous violin concerto. Pierre Monteux will also conduct Beethoven's overture, "Coriolanus," Rosehlin's "Three Chorales," Goosen's "Tam o' Shanter" and Debussy's "Prilintemps."

EASTER REDEMPTION

THE FOOL

"'The Fool,' a play by Channing Pollock, now being presented at the Selwyn Theatre, Boston, is of so high an order that it deserves advertising even in a Church Calendar. So seldom does a play with a Christian message appear that when it finally comes it should have the heartiest commendation and patronage of all lovers of real art, clean entertainment, and genuine religion. This play is a distinct contribution to Christianity and will do much good."

* * *

William Dietrich Strong, and his assistant, Herbert R. Boardman, announce a concert for two pianos in Steinert Hall next Tuesday evening.

Almost a Bride at Sixteen, but Didn't Register

Marguerite de la Motte, idol of many movie fans, who is featured in "What a Wife Learned," which will be shown Monday at Gordon's Capitol, Olympia and Central Square Theatres, nearly succumbed to a dart from the bow of Dan Cupid when she was sixteen years old.

"I thank my lucky stars that I didn't yield; I don't think a girl should marry too young," said Miss De la Motte recently. "I was too young then to know what I was doing. I'm afraid it would have been just another case of marrying in haste and repenting at leisure."

In the picture Miss De la Motte has the role of a modern ambitious woman whose husband becomes jealous of her career. The play is said to be one of the best ever screened which deals with the much discussed theme, "Can a woman have a career and husband, too?"

FOLLIES GIRL SOON TO WED MILLIONAIRE

MARGIE WHITTINGTON

"Come and get me" answered this beauty of the chorus when Ralph Friedman, Millwaukee manufacturer, cabled his proposal of marriage from Paris. And so the Friedman yacht is being prepared for a honeymoon cruise. But the bride-to-be declares matrimony will not be allowed to end her "stage career."

New York, March 17.—Another Follies girl has captured a millionaire. Margie Whittington, celebrated beauty of the Ziegfeld classic, announced her engagement to Ralph Friedman, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of Milwaukee. Mr. Friedman is now in Paris.

Four days ago he cabled Miss Whittington at her home, No. 35 West Seventy-second street, proposing marriage and asking her to sail at once for Paris. Miss Whittington cabled this reply:

"Dear Ralph, yes. But if you want me, come and get me."

The groom-to-be cabled in reply that he was sailing on March 31, and that his yacht is being fitted for a honeymoon cruise.

Miss Whittington declared that her experiment in matrimony wouldn't necessarily interfere with her stage career, and that she would return to the Ziegfeld chorus after the honeymoon.

Mlle. X——, at Blainville. A sore on the left foot, probably of specific origin. A slight sprain has brought about a swelling of the foot accompanied by acute pains. Different treatments have only had a negative effect, and in a little while a suppurating sore appears which seems to indicate caries of the bone. Walking becomes more and more painful and difficult in spite of the treatment. On the advice of a former patient who had been cured, she comes to me, and there is noticeable relief after the first visits. Little by little the swelling goes down, the pain becomes less intense, the suppuration lessens, and finally the sore heals over. The process has taken a few months. At present the foot is practically normal, but although the pain and swelling have entirely disappeared, the back flexion of the foot is not yet perfect, which makes the patient limp slightly.

Mme. R——, of Chavigny. Metritis dating from 10 years back. Comes at the end of July, 1916. Improvement is immediate, the pain and loss of blood diminish rapidly, and by the following 29th of September both have disappeared. The monthly period, which lasted from eight to ten days, is now over in four.

Mme. H——, rue Guilbert-de-Pivercourt, at Nancy, aged 49. Suffers from a varicose ulcer dating from September, 1914, which has treated according to her doctor's advice, but without success. The lower part of the leg is enormous (the ulcer, which is as large as a two-franc piece and goes right down to the bone, is situated above the ankle). The inflammation is very intense, the suppuration copious, and the pains extremely violent. The patient comes for the first time in April, 1916, and the improvement, which is visible after the first treatment, continues without interruption. By the 18th of February, 1917, the swelling has entirely subsided, and the pain and irritation have disappeared. The sore is still there, but it is no larger than a pea and it is only a few millimeters in depth; it still discharges very slightly. By 1920 the cure has long been complete.

Mlle. D——, at Mirecourt, 16 years of age. Has suffered from attacks of nerves for three years. The attacks, at first infrequent, have gradually come at closer intervals. When she comes to see me on the 1st of April, 1917, she has had three attacks in the preceding fortnight. Up to the 18th of April she did not have any at all. I may add that this young lady, from the time she began the treatment, was no longer troubled by the bad headaches from which she had suffered almost constantly.

MISSING STUDENT HIT BY WANDERLUST

RICH HAUL OF SILKS IN WORCESTER

Seder Factory Looted of Fancy Waists Ready for Easter Trade

Worcester, March 17.—Thousands of dollars worth of high grade silks and finished silk waists for women were stolen from the factory of Samuel Seder & Brother, shirt waist manufacturers here.

The thieves evidently were well acquainted with the stock, as they took only the fancy materials and the finished waists ready to be sent out for the Easter trade. They forced two locks to get into the place and took the loot away in a motor car.

The safe of the Queensbury Mills in South Worcester was also forced, but the thieves were frightened away before they could reach $1,800 it contained.

SNOW VICTIM'S VALUABLES VANISH

James L. Roach, sixty years old, waded one mile through snow four feet deep to reach his lonely camp in Coburnville, a desolate section of Lynnfield.

Some hours later his son, John, made the same hazardous trip only to find his father dead, presumably a victim of his exertion breaking through the drifts.

Five men, assistants to an undertaker, took one hour and a half to carry the corpse to the main road. Then John Roach looked for valuables his father had taken from Boston safety deposit vault some time in the past three weeks. They were missing.

Lynnfield police took up the search today. The son thinks his father was robbed. The police are of the opinion the dead man may have secreted his possessions somewhere about his camp, once the Summer residence of former Mayor Rich of Lynn.

Neither the police nor the medical examiner could find evidence of foul play, and believe the man died a natural death. A burning oil lamp indicated that Roach had died but a short while before his son reached there.

HUSBAND FORGIVES HIS ELOPING WIFE

Peabody, March 17.—Letters written by Joseph Marcheska, aged eight years, to his little brother, led to the discovery of the boys' mother, Mary Marcheska, and Julius Brezniski, of Harris street, who disappeared February 23. The woman's husband has forgiven her.

Mrs. Marcheska, who is twenty-seven and pretty, took her eight-year-old son and left her four-year-old boy in her home, No. 38 Jacob street. Her husband, a leather worker, immediately notified the police.

The couple were located in Hartford, Ct., and Brezniski was arrested. Inspector Edward Pierce of the Peabody police, brought Mrs. Marcheska and her son home yesterday.

Mrs. Marcheska was in Peabody Court today on a charge of desertion. Marcheska asked that she be allowed to return to him.

STATE CONSTABULARY GRADUATION MONDAY

Governor Cox will attend the graduation exercises at Commonwealth Armroy Monday afternoon of another batch of recruits for the State Constabulary. Following their period of intensive training, the new constabulary men will show their stunts on horseback and motorcycles. The complement of the force is now 100 men.

ADVENTURE CALLS TO YOUTH

Missing Tufts Student a Victim of Wanderlust, His Parents Believe

Edward O. Sampson, missing twenty-year-old Tufts Engineering School senior, is the victim of nothing worse than an attack of wanderlust.

So declares his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Sampson, of No. 48 Burrill street, Swampscott.

Their son, they say, always found the humdrum existence of a student irksome, and was always chafing under the restraints of study. They believe he has hit the "open road" in search of adventure, and that when he has satisfied his wanderlust, he will return.

There is some question as to the young man's present whereabouts, but it can be stated positively that he is safe and well.

E. O. Sampson.

According to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Sampson of No. 48 Burrill street, Swampscott, "Eddie" is working in Providence, R. I.

IN NAVY, SAYS FRIEND.

Nathaniel Bartlett of Swampscott, a friend of the young collegian, declared on the other hand that Sampson enlisted in the Navy, and is at Norfolk, Virginia.

Miss Grace Kennedy of No. 103 Pearson road, Somerville, beautiful nineteen-year-old sweetheart of the missing youth, doesn't know where he is, but is sure he will come back to her.

Sampson dropped out of sight Monday morning of this week, a few hours after he had been asked to resign as house steward of Beta Tau fraternity. The table had been running behind financially, but according to Sampson's fraternity brothers this was a matter of management alone, and there was nothing wrong with the steward's accounts.

LEFT FAREWELL NOTES.

The young man was last seen by his friends at the chapter house, No. 181 College avenue, Somerville. He wrote his mother that he was going to sea. To his sweetheart he wrote that he had "gone and won't be in" and wrote his fraternity president, Allan Grant, that they would never meet again.

Miss Grace Kennedy.

Then began a search almost nation-wide in its scope.

TEXTILE EMPLOYERS DISCUSS DEMANDS

Fall River, March 17 (By International News Service).—The executive committee of the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association today held a meeting lasting nearly two hours to discuss the request for a fifteen per cent. wage increase made by the operatives. No announcement was made following the meeting. Thomas F. McMahon, president of the textile workers, is expected here today, but the manufacturers have declared they will not need them.

GIRL ACCUSER OF RUTH

DOLORES DIXON
(International News Reel Photo.)

The nineteen-year-old New York girl who is suing "Babe" Ruth for $50,000, charging that as the result of his attacks during July and August, 1921, "with force and violence," she will soon be the mother of his child, emerged from hiding to pose for these exclusive photographs. Her own story will start in Monday's Boston American.

PARADE DAY'S FEATURE IN SO. BOSTON

Evacuation of Boston by the British 147 years ago and the birthday of Ireland's patron saint, were celebrated in South Boston today.

Thomas F. Cassidy

The district, with houses gaily decked with flags and bunting, but with streets clogged with ice, awoke to the thunderous salute of the guns at the Army base at 6 a.m.

The order of events on the Evacuation program was:

9 a. m.—Breakfast to Thomas F. Cassidy of Pittsfield, invited guest of the city, at Copley-Plaza Hotel.

9 a. m.—First Evacuation Day performance for children in Broadway Theatre.

11 a. m.—Second performance for children in Broadway Theatre.

12 m.—Salute at Army Base, South Boston.

1:15 p. m.—Parade formation on streets between Andrew square and Edward Everett square.

2:30 p. m.—Start of parade.

2:30 to 5:30 p. m.—Open house in South Boston homes.

6 p. m.—Salute at Army Base South Boston.

8 p. m.—Historical concert at South Boston High School.

8:30 p. m.—Banquet, South Boston Citizens' Association, in Municipal Building, South Boston. Oration by Mr. Cassidy.

Despite difficulties of marching due to the ice, and the refusal of American Legion posts to appear, the big feature of the day was the parade. It was strictly military, the roster being made up of regulars from the forts and navy yard, veterans of the three American wars, military associations and cadets. Chief Marshal Thomas Gough announced the following route of march:

Formation on streets between Edward Everett square and Andrew square.

Parade started at Andrew square at 2:30 p. m., proceeded over Dorchester street, East Broadway to K street, to East Sixth street, to P street, to East Fourth street, to L street, to East Broadway, to West Broadway, to Dorchester avenue.

The parade was reviewed by the Governor, Mayor, General Brewster and other guests and members of the Evacuation Day committee from a stand on West Broadway. The Chief Marshal reviewed the parade at Dorchester avenue and West Broadway.

The split between the legion posts and the parade officials was the result of assigning the legion men places in line behind the delegation of Veterans of Foreign Wars. The chief marshal is a member of the Foreign War Veterans Association. Major-General A. W. Brewster, commanding the First Corps Area, refused requests from certain individuals who asked him to withdraw the Thirteenth Infantry, "Boston's Own Regiment," from taking part in the parade.

'BABE' TO FACE DOLORES SOME TIME IN APRIL

New York, March 17.—"Babe" Ruth will probably face the girl who accuses him of being the father of her expected child late in April. The ball player is scheduled to return from the Spring training trip of the New York Yankees on the morning of April 14. His reply to her complaint is due April 20.

The complaint made by Dolores Dixon with its demand for $50,000 damages was on file today in the county clerk's office. It failed to give any details of the alleged attacks of the married ballplayer on Miss Dixon. Although the ball player is supposed to have made violent love to the young girl in July their relations continued far into August.

TEWKSBURY FUGITIVE SOUGHT

Nick Smith, Jailed Slayer, Makes His Getaway Under Cover of Night

Nick Smith, the gun-man, is at large again.

Lynn police received word today that Smith had escaped from Tewksbury prison camp and to watch for him as he might try to return to the shoe city.

Smith is twenty-eight years old, five feet six inches tall, weighs 140 pounds and has chestnut hair and blue eyes. When he left Tewksbury he wore, it is supposed, a gray cap, gray reefer coat over his suit, and heavy black shoes.

Four years ago Chief Inspector William Kane of Lynn arrested Smith in Lynn. Smith tripped Kane, who landed with such force that one of his shoulders was broken.

Smith escaped to Canada. In 1920 he was sentenced to two years for manslaughter in shooting Patrick Carney on a Canadian street. He was released later on parole but was brought back to Lynn, which had a warrant for him for violation of earlier parole from Concord Reformatory.

In Canada Smith contracted tubercular trouble. He was sent from Lynn to Rutland Sanitarium and thence to Tewksbury prison camp whence he escaped Thursday midnight.

TO ASK $10,000 IN FREE SPEECH ARREST

New York, March 17.—The American Civil Liberties Union announced today that it would bring a suit for damages against George M. Beach, superintendent of police at Waterbury, Ct., for the alleged unlawful arrest of Carlo Tresca, New York radical speaker, at a meeting in Waterbury last Sunday.

Attorneys for the union, the announcement said, advised that "the forcible prevention of Tresca's address at Concordia Hall constituted a technical arrest. The court decision is clear on that point."

"Local attorneys are being advised," the announcement continues, "to bring suit in the sum of $10,000 against Beach on Tresca's behalf.

The union announced that another "free speech meeting," at which Tresca will speak, will be held at Waterbury Sunday, March 25.

LINK SEIZED MAN WITH "RED" MOVE

Danbury, Ct., March 17.—Alfred Wagenknecht, under arrest on the charge of fraudulently applying for a passport last Spring by declaring under oath that he was Walter Frederick Bonstrup of Cincinnati, is said to be wanted in Michigan.

It is said Federal authorities searched the country for Wagenknecht, whom they had watched for a long time, and it was only recently they learned the man had gone to Europe on a mission said to have been linked up with the Communist movement.

FIND MISSING MAN IN PHILADELPHIA

Springfield, Mass., March 17.—Fred W. Roberts, fifty-three years old, prominent contractor of East Longmeadow, near here, is alive and well, according to a telegram received today from Philadelphia. Roberts disappeared Thursday and his relatives asked the police to locate him. No reason for his disappearance is known here.

AMERICAN WINS TWILIGHT FIGHT FOR DILBOY POST

LEAGUE BACKS DOWN WHEN UNDER FIRE

By JOHN B. GILLOOLY.

Score one for the Boston American!

The newspaper has won its fight for the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., of Somerville.

John B. Gillooly

There will be a Dilboy Post team in the Twilight League this year.

And Commander Driscoll thanks the Boston American.

Of course we like to feel that our efforts are appreciated. The real satisfaction, however, comes in helping to boost the sport game.

The details of our fight:

The Twilight League is a Greater Boston organization. The Boston American was largely instrumental in its success. The columns of this newspaper were opened to the Twilight leaguers.

We felt that Boston fans had tired of a rather poor brand of big league baseball and that they would welcome the amateurs and semi-pros. Results proved we were correct. Twilight League games attracted huge crowds. As many as 30,000 persons sometimes turned out for a single contest.

The Dilboy Post wanted to make a team in the league, especially after St. Joseph's dropped out. Lawrence was given the opening.

We then took up the fight for the Dilboy Post. And we won.

Twilight League officials decided to add two more teams to its circuit. So the Dilboy Post and Millstreams of Chelsea were admitted.

Commander Driscoll of the 100-boy Post says: "Thanks, fine work, the Boston American did it, our members are tickled over your work.

Very good.

We thank you.

Boston's big league baseball outlook is more promising. News from the Southern training camps tell of scrappy playing by Red Sox and Braves. It is a long time since this city had a real brand of big league baseball. Here's hoping the Southern training camp brand will keep getting better and better.

HORSE RACING

Shamrock Appropriatisfy Is Favorite for Jefferson Derby at New Orleans Today

By GUS DALY.
(Racing Editor.)

The Jefferson Derby, "classic" of the Winter's racing at New Orleans will be decided today, and the afternoon will bring to a close the Crescent City's racing.

Gus Daly

About an even dozen will take the word. T. W. O'Brien of Chicago has the favorite in his good colt Shamrock, especially if the course be dry. Two others which will have a strong following are Chiva and Selling Son. Both have shown good form, an ability to carry weight and go the long distance.

Colonel Winn should know any that success has crowned the efforts of both Jefferson Park and the fair grounds this Winter far beyond expectations.

Those old Pinkerton of the "Eagle Eye" was kept busy shaking hands with his many friends.

Eddie Dugan and "Happy" Buxton will sail for France March 20 to enter the employ of a prominent Russian owner; James Wingfield, an American trainer, has charge of the string which won close to two million francs last year.

At Havana the fine weather, excellent racing conditions, and consistent effort of the mare, has kept everybody in a happy mood.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Fleishman of New York and Sir George and Lady McKay of London enjoyed the sport during the past week.

Blanc Being Made Himself a Favorite

When Blanc Seing won his first start at Tia Juana, at a mile and a sixteenth, in 1:44 3-5, he established himself as a favorite.

C. B. Irwin's racer, Alsadam, may be English bred, but is regarded as the All American equine star of the far West. His performances the next two weeks, 6½ furlongs in 1:16, equalled track record; 3-mile in 1:11 1-5, 1128 pounds up equalling track record; one-mile and forty yards in 1:39 2-5, a world's record—were remarkable. Others in the same stable with Alsadane will campaign East this Summer.

Season Will Open at Bowie April 2

The thoroughbreds will play their next stand in the Heart of Maryland, where the Eastern season opens at Bowie April 2. Harry Payne Whitney, Morefield Jones, W. R. Coe, Thomas Clyde, S. Rose, C. Whitney, James W. Bean, R. Vestal, James Arthur, H. G. Bedwell, S. Lawrence Swenke, B. C. Champion and G. W. Forman all have entered liberally. Young Marshall Cassidy, who did such good work last year will act as starting judge.

The report that Dr. Jos. Wm. Cares and Monsieur Jean Dubois will route from New Orleans was greatly "exaggerated," for they are all go ing to Bowie.

KILBANE HAS A RECORD ON TITLE

New York, March 16. — Johnny Kilbane has achieved the goal of his fistic ambition, to go down in history as having held a world's title longer than any man in the annals of American pugilism.

On February 22, Kilbane celebrated the eleventh year of his reign as king of the featherweights. When he did he had the joy of knowing that he had eclipsed the record of John L. Sullivan, the mighty warrior became champion February 7, 1882, when he whipped Paddy Ryan and didn't surrender until he stretched Jimmy Corbett on September 7, 1892—ten years and seven months.

Of the dates which show how long each of the present world's champions has been camping around in those seasons:

John Kilbane, featherweight, won title February 22, 1912, from Abe Attell.

Jimmy Wilde, flyweight, won title in 1916 from Tommy Noble.

Benny Leonard, lightweight, won title May 28, 1917, from Fred Welsh.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight, won title July 1, 1919, from Jess Willard.

Johnny Wilson, middleweight, won title May 8, 1920, from Mike O'Dowd.

Joe Lynch, bantamweight, won title July 19, 1922, from Johnny Buff.

Rolling Sihl, light heavyweight, won title September 24, 1922, from Georges Carpentier.

Mickey Walker, welterweight, November 1, 1922, from Jack Britton.

PURPLE COLLEGIANS WIN FROM WEBSTER

Worcester, March 17.—The Purple collegians defeated Webster 27 to 1 in the third game of a five-game series. It was a hardy, rough contest. The Webster team scored only one point in the last half while the winners passed a total of seven.

The lineup:

O'Dowd Is Knocked Out in Round by Jock Malone

St. Paul, March 17.—Jock Malone, the St. Paul middleweight, brought the lingering career of Mike O'Dowd, former middleweight champion, to a close here, when he knocked out his former tutor in the first round of a scheduled fifteen-session go. O'Dowd lost his championship to Johnny Wilson of Boston.

The defeat of O'Dowd in such a quick order was a big surprise. Instead of the usual "feeling-out" process that is so evident in the first round, both boxers fought savagely from the start.

Mike O'Dowd

O'Dowd, with his head lowered, was the aggressor, forcing Malone about the ring, missing vicious swings to the head and body. Malone took advantage of one of these openings and countered with a left to the head and right to the jaw. The end soon followed.

700 BALL PLAYERS AT CAMPS IN SOUTH

By THOMAS L. CUMMISKEY.

Richmond, Va., March 17—Dixie, from Florida to Texas and up into Arkansas, is full of baseballs, tossed and batted, and rife with the chatter of the game, as fifteen major league teams go hard at it in Spring training. From out Catalina Island, California, comes echoes of the Chicago Cubs' preparations. Sixteen clubs are in full swing of the annual practice.

Roughly, there are about 700 men at work, coming from all parts of the land, big cities, universities, sandlots, small towns, yes, and country cross-roads. Out of this number, next June 15 and up until then, three hundred will taste disappointment, as they are shunted elsewhere. Some will be veterans, declared through, the great majority rookies, either branded "N. G." or "for further seasoning."

Out of this motley band of 700, 400 will be retained, computed on the twenty-five-player limit allowed each team after June 15. Sixteen managers and as many again assistants are now at the job of welding as strong a team as material allows from approximately forty-five men brought South. It's quite a life, quite any other the whole world over.

Correspondents are now singing of "finds," persons who look to save the goods. Here and there they are starring first verses of a swan song for veterans, slipping under the burden of years or outclassed by some rookie.

They chant, too, however, of the marvelous work of men long in the game, and giving indication as the warm Southland suns limber them of another big year in the majors.

Of all the songs of wonder and praise, none are greater than those about Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins, Walter Johnson? Here is a trio that are on the eve of their eighteenth consecutive big league season. Cobb is 36 years old, and handling the double job of manager and centre-fielder of the Tigers. Collins, thirty-six, is second baseman, still the king of all at the berth, and captain of the White Sox.

Johnson, thirty-five, may still be called the star of the Senators' hurling staff. Of the great trio, Johnson, overworked for years, is perhaps the one to marvel at the most, having such an exacting position.

• • •

Next to them, four years less in service come Tris Speaker, manager and great centrefielder of the Indians; "Rabbit" Maranville, formerly of the Indians, lately acquired by the Braves; Amos Strunk, outfielder of the White Sox, and Rube Marquard, southpawing for the Braves. They, too, are men to marvel at.

LENGLEN LOSES IN DOUBLES

Nice, March 17.—Miss Ryan received some consolation for her defeat in the singles, when she eliminated the "French flash" and her partner in the mixed doubles, 6—3, 7—5.

Miss Ryan was paired with Lycette, while Mlle. Lenglen had Sumarokoff as her partner.

Mme. Lenglen did not conceal her displeasure at losing the doubles match. She bit her thumb and glanced ruefully at her partner as he tossed away point after point.

After the match she declared it was the first time since 1919 that she was on a losing team. In that year Miss Ryan, coupled with Lycett, also defeated her in the mixed doubles.

In the semi-finals of the women's doubles Mlle. Lenglen, joined with Miss Ryan, defeated the Misses Ayres and Vlasto, 6—3, 6—0.

Ford Beats Castle

Lawrence, March 17.—Henry Ford of Boston defeated Mike Castle of Lawrence in the main bout of ten rounds before the Economical A. C. The contest was held in the City Hall Auditorium. Ford led in every round.

JESS WILLARD WANTS BOUT WITH FIRPO

New York, March 17.—Tex Rickard announced today the receipt of a letter from Jess Willard, in which the former heavyweight champion offers to meet Luis Firpo, giant Argentine, here on May 12, in the event that Floyd Johnson is unable to fight on that date. Willard and Johnson are scheduled to box on that date for the benefit of the local milk fund, but the young Iowan has been ill and some doubt is felt that he will be able to go through with the engagement.

HAMILTON A WINNER IN OPENING BATTLE

The Hamilton Tigers opened their two days' engagement at the Arena and defeated the Boston Hockey Club two goals to one. Art Langley, the Boston goal tender, did a fine piece of work in the net, and but for him and his wonderful ability to deflect shots at the cage the Canadian team would have won by a bigger score.

The Boston team played a good game, however, one of its best and tried desperately to tie the score in the third and last period.

Cooper of the Hamilton team starred. His shot won the game for the visitors. Mitchell scored the first Hamilton goal. The Boston goal was due to an accident, as it was made by Cooper unintentionally.

TENNIS ASSOCIATION STRONG FOR DAVIS

New York, March 17.—Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, will be asked by the executive committee to reconsider his determination to resign as president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The committee at its meeting will ask him to continue as president, even if official duties compel him to curtail his activities.

Should he insist, Vice-President George W. Wightman of Boston will take the helm.

MISS BANCROFT PLAYS FOR TWO TITLES

By FRED C. LANE.

The Longwood Cricket Club can once more boast of having the Women's National singles indoor champion and the National indoor doubles champions listed on the club's roster.

This afternoon the finals of both these annual events will be played on the covered courts at Chestnut Hill. In the singles, Miss Leslie Bancroft, runner-up last year is opposed by Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole of North Andover, runner-up to Mrs. Mallory in 1921.

The doubles match brings together Mrs. George W. Wightman, former indoor champion, and Miss Bancroft, against Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Frank H. Godfrey, Southern Florida champion.

Bill Tilden, world's single champion and Miss Brenda Hedstrom of Buffalo will play Mrs. Wightman and Burnham Dell, former Princeton star, in the National Indoor Mixed Doubles championship.

The superb play of Miss Bancroft in her match with Mrs. Godfrey makes her favorite over Mrs. Cole, against Mrs. Godfrey, who recently defeated her in the Palm Beach tournament, is cause for that opinion.

The prospect is bright for Miss Bancroft and Mrs. Wightman to win the doubles championship. This pair defeated Miss Lillian Scharman and Miss Ceres Baker in a three-set match yesterday.

Some Doubt About Result in Mixed Doubles

There is some doubt in the minds of close followers of the sport as to the result of the mixed doubles match, in which Bill Tilden and Miss Brenda Hedstrom will play Mrs. Wightman and Burnham Dell.

It is a sure bet that all the sparkling shots in this match will not come from the Tilden side of the net for Burnham Dell is one of the few players who can hit the ball hard and keep it inside the lines. Mrs. Wightman showed flashes of her championship days yesterday.

What Miss Hedstrom lacks Tilden supplies.

The masterly fashion in which Miss Bancroft defeated her clubmate, Mrs. Godfrey, has local tennis circles wondering. When the results of the first set was announced as 6-3, there was a noticeable stir in the gallery.

Miss Bancroft Scores Twelve Against Three

An idea of Miss Bancroft's accuracy may be gained from the fact that she scored 12 placement shots against three for her opponent. She had only seven faults in the first set, five of which were nets and two outs.

Mrs. Godfrey changed her tactics in the second set and took more chances with her southpaw opponent. She raced to the net and sought an opening which she found in two occasions. In the second set, Mrs. Godfrey won two games of the match, but this may be attributed to carelessness of Miss Bancroft, who had won her objective, the first set, and rested.

Her sterling play

L' 'e Damage Was Done as a Result

Little damage was done as a result for Miss Bancroft had won three games in succession in the second set, when Mrs. Godfrey captured her two. The popular West Newton girl buckled down to hard work at that stage and the rest was a procession. She won the next three games, set, and match.

Bill Tilden has played remarkable tennis on every appearance on the local courts, but Boston fandom cannot remember when he played so well and so hard as yesterday.

He raced around the court with the speed of a deer and had the large gallery constantly applauding his remarkable shots. Two worthy opponents, Mrs. Godfrey and Henry Guild opposed him and his partner, Miss Brenda Hedstrom.

BOXING AND WRESTLING

Fistic Junk or Diamonds? You may hand John Pesek world's title.

By JACK CONWAY.

Luis Angel Firpo, a rather huge young man from Argentine, has even been able to defeat the orators of public office in the battle for newspaper space during the past week. All because this twenty-nine-year old, slow moving, would be individual knocked out old Bill Brennan in twelve rounds in New York.

There are people who still insist that Brennan took a flop for Firpo or, at the least, permitted his jaw to linger in the way of a knockout blow.

Bill Brennan's stay in the hospital, regardless of the motive that prompted him to retreat to a cot, has had the desired effect. The public has accepted the Firpo-Brennan mill as the real thing.

Firpo has been elevated to the pugilistic heights and will make a million dollars for himself during the next two years. Rather interesting for a young man who does not know anything about high finance or big business.

If Firpo lived in South Boston or Chelsea, he would not be worth a dime as a box office attraction. From Argentine gives color to him as a boxer. It puts the old jack into the box office.

MLLE LENGLEN WINS TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Nice, March 17.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen of France won the women's tennis singles today by defeating Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3. The triumph was almost as conclusive as that scored by Mlle. Lenglen over Mrs. Mallory yesterday, the French girl dropping only one game in four sets to both Americans.

Unlike most fighters who are basking in the limelight, Firpo is willing to put his slugger to the wheel and help a worthy charity. He has agreed to meet a suitable opponent at the Mlle Fund show in New York on May 12. As Jess Willard battles Floyd Johnson in the feature bout, the gate receipts should run up close to a million dollars.

Meanwhile Dempsey is waiting in his corner. All he asks is an opportunity to fight. In which respect "Tiger Jack" is much like John L. Sullivan was in his prime.

Sullivan won his honors in the ring, not at tea parties.

John Pesek, Nebraska Tiger Man, wins again. This time George Kotsonaros, Greek champion, is the victim after a furious engagement. Pesek, as is usually his custom, left his vanquished foe in an unconscious condition.

Pesek will be the world's heavyweight champion within a short time if given a shot at the title. He is 180 pounds of fighting bone and flesh. He is a better wrestler than Strangler Lewis right now.

Spencer Gardner, sensational New England bantamweight, is finally going to be shown in Boston. He meets Abe Friedman in a bout for the New England bantamweight championship at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night. Gardner has referees' decisions over Young Montreal and Terry Martin. He has outpointed Danny Edwards, Red Chapman, Mickey Reinout and a flock of other stars in no-decision matches. It looks rather dubious for Friedman. Anyhow Boston fans are going to see the latest bantamweight star. That should satisfy.

RESALE VALUE OF 1923 CARS INCREASED BY BETTER FINISH

GASOLINE COST ALSO LOWERED

Tire Expense and Repairs Materially Reduced in New Models

If the question were propounded to almost any group of persons as to what element is involved in owning a motor car they consider the most important the answer, in nine cases out of ten, would be the expense of operation and maintenance. Comparatively few people are deterred from purchasing a car by first cost.

There are nine general items of expense in the operation of a passenger car. In order of their size they are as follows: depreciation, gasoline, storage, repairs, tires, oil, license fees, driver's wages and insurance. An analysis of the first reason that in every one of these items the expense on a 1923 car is less than upon its predecessors.

HIGHER RESALE VALUE.

Depreciation, the difference between the price paid and present value and the largest item of all, is materially reduced on the 1923 cars. This is because present cars of the reputable makes will have higher resale values. Better finish means that the car will look better and bring a higher price when it is offered for sale by the original owner. The increased use of steel bodies with inherently smoother joints and less demand made by prospective purchasers, have brought a reduction in depreciation.

Tire mileage has also increased. Improvements in the construction of tires have made it possible to obtain the present low grade tires at much lower cost, and this reduction has been augmented by the increased mileage. Improvement in the design of the car itself has also contributed to the reduction in tire expense.

Gasoline consumption has been reduced by the use of higher compression motors, which have been developed to a point where they will operate on the present low grade fuels. Improvements in carburetion have also contributed to the reduction in the cost of gasoline.

THE EXPENSE REDUCED.

The expense is reduced more to the present time than any other item of upkeep. Tires are cheaper now than ever before in the history of the automobile.

Alvan Macauley, Packard president, says: "Passenger cars can be operated today at a cost of from 6 cents a mile upwards, the lower prices applying, of course, to the smaller and lower priced cars. This means that with more than two persons in the car the cost of transportation is on a par with railroad transportation. In some cases the cost is less. Lower costs in the car itself, the service and lower prices of spare parts, together with the reduction in price of gasoline, have brought about the present economical motoring conditions."

A St. Patrick's Day Story of How a Young Irish Maid Lost Her Charge Only to Find Him and Her Sweetheart Together

By Elizabeth M. Joyce.

THERESA O'TOOLE looked out timidly from her big Irish blue eyes at the strange new world to which she had lately come. When far away across the ocean, she had heard that there were wonderful opportunities in what was still called the "new world." So she had left her little village home in Ireland and come across with a group of the neighborhood girls and boys.

Theresa, looked out timidly.

But one by one her companions had found employment and gone away. Not being used to the ways of her new environment, she had lost trace of them all—Michael and Ann and Rosie and Patrick and Ellen and the rest of them. All had gradually drifted away from her in the swirl and bustle of the big city, and at last she was left to herself—a stranger in a strange land.

She had soon found employment as a nurse in a big house with a brownstone front. Little Arthur, her charge, a chubby, small boy of four years, was devoted to her and never tired of hearing the wonderful stories of fairies and elves she told him each night. Then she would sing him to sleep with some of the plaintive songs that the Irish folk love so dearly.

Little Arthur's mother, a charming young society matron, came into the nursery every evening to hear the stories and the songs and then would tiptoe softly out of the room, leaving the boy fast asleep in Theresa's care.

But poor little Theresa, far away from her home and her childhood friends, was lonely.

"If only Ellen lived near enough for me to see her now and then, it wouldn't be so bad," she fretted. "Or if Michael or Rosie or —Patrick could drop in sometimes like they used to do in the old country. I do miss Patrick Doyle so. But I've lost track of them all—every one of them."

Of course, Theresa with her wavy dark hair and her fresh, rosy cheeks did not lack attention. She could scarcely go out on the streets or into the squares with little Arthur that some presumptive youth did not try to gain a smile from her. But Theresa, while not austere, was preoccupied.

The Great Day.

Theresa had been taking care of little Arthur for several months when the first signs of Spring began to show in the city squares. "Ah, the Winter was almost over now," sighed Theresa happily, and soon everyth'n' would be touched with green—the most beautiful color in the world in Theresa's eyes. It was the color for St. Patrick's Day, too, and that would soon be here.

Then blustering and changeable, with a sparkle of sunshine and a dash of snow, St. Patrick's Day had arrived. Theresa's sad little heart beat jubilantly again, and fastening on her coat a piece of the brightest green ribbon she could find, she took little Arthur and went out to the park to celebrate the day.

Almost before she realized it, Theresa's loneliness had fled. Admirers of the old saint, the sons and daughters of the old soil, were in evidence everywhere, each wearing a little knot or a flower of green. The florist's windows displayed harps and clusters of growing shamrock with jars of queer green carnations and roses, and Theresa felt that she had come into her own again.

Then suddenly, from somewhere in the distance, came a bar of music and Theresa's heart bounded with joy. It was "The Wearin' of the Green," and breathlessly she hurried away in the direction from which it came.

It was only a fife and drum corps, but the little Irish girl's heart thrilled as she listened. She followed after it, forgetful of everything else, followed after it until the musicians disappeared around a corner and the inspiring sounds died away.

Then Theresa came to herself again with a start and looked around. Where was Arthur? She dashed madly back the way she had come, hustling and bustling people out of her way as she went.

It had really been but a few blocks but it seemed miles to Theresa as she hurried back to the square where she had left the little boy, all the joy of St. Patrick's Day music now as ashes in her heart.

But, oh, joy of joys, he was there safe and sound and laughing aloud in the arms of a big blue-coated policeman.

An Old Friend

Then she stopped short, for the officer who was entertaining Arthur was—Patrick, her old friend and playmate, Patrick Doyle.

"Oh, Theresa, Theresa, is it really yourself I'm lookin' at, or am I dreamin' again?" asked Patrick Doyle.

"Sure it's meself," she answered him, her blue eyes dancing and her cheeks like roses. "Oh, how can I ever thank you enough for taking care of Arthur for me? You see, I forgot myself entirely, entirely, following 'The Wearin' of the Green.'"

"Oh, it's me business to watch out for the lost kiddies," he answered lightly. "And now that I've found you at last I'm going to watch out for you, too. You're never going to get away from me again. What have you to say to that Theresa, mavourneen?"

He added the last word softly for nobody else to hear, and she replied as softly.

"I'm not wantin' to get away again ever. I'm so glad I'm found. But I know it's just because you're named after St. Patrick that we found each other on St. Patrick's Day."

What Every Girl Should Know

DRAWN BY POPINI

ONCE upon a time, not so very long ago, nearly every mother told her daughter that the way to a man's heart was by the immemorial route of his tummy. "Feed the brute!" was the cry. But today—ah, things aren't so easy now!

Today there seem to be ever so many more things a girl must learn. The cook book has given place to a whole library—phrenology, psychology, psycho-analysis—but Cupid compresses them all in ONE volume and a working model.

Don't forget the index! For so big is "The Heart of Man" that a perfect index is required to lead her to those places where dreams and hopes and deep determination lie buried where they spring—IN Spring—to life at the magic touch of true love only!—Popini.

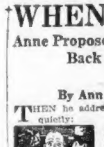
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Proposed to Take the Gaunt Man of the Hovel Back After He Had Told What He Knew of Dick West

By Ann Lisle



And then Jennings, with a wink at the others, said: "Welcome to the pine and balsam country. You'll be taken care of until you're well again. Nothing to worry about. The only string tied to this is that you speak out with absolute honesty to this lady. Will you?"

WHEN he addressed the man quietly:

"Welcome to the pine and balsam country. You'll be taken care of until you're well again. Nothing to worry about. The only string tied to this is that you speak out with absolute honesty to this lady. Will you?"

"To Mis' Harrison? Sure," replied the man called Jennings amazingly.

"All right, here's something to seal the bargain," and a bill passed from Ralph Lacy's hands to those of the human skeleton watching him with avid eyes. "There's more where that came from. Now—tell us, who hired you to stand guard over every bit of mail or message that went in or out of Mr. Harrison's office?"

"I don't right know his name," replied Jennings. "But I'd know him if I didn't see him any nearer than China. He were tall and Indian dark. His nose were long and poking into other folks' business. And his mouth had a sidewise twist and were as dark as if it had been hit in a fight—like a red bruise pushing on his heath, which were long."

Hot on the Trail

"Dick West!" I gasped, sinking back with a sudden hope that we were hot on our enemy's trail.

"Didn't hear him named by any name, ma'am," declared the gaunt Jennings, leaning against the luxurious upholstery of Tony's car, and continuing after his own fashion with the story of the man who'd hired him to act as a spy in Jim's office building. "But I'd know him wherever I saw him. There was something about that queer twisted dark mouth of his no one would be likely to forget. He spoke out of the corner of it leaning it hard against his teeth. But as I was saying, I didn't hear him called by no name includin' the one you just spoke."

"Was he alone when he came to you?" asked Ralph Lacy with a carelessness I recognized as studied.

"No, he wasn't what you'd call alone," said the man laughing for the first time since we'd come to this tumble-down, out-of-the-way hovel of his. "He had a man with him, though right at first I didn't notice him much. Guess I took him for a shadow."

"Can you describe him?" demanded Ralph Lacy shutting off the garrulousness that came, undoubtedly from loneliness.

"Not so good as the first man, though I saw him more. If you called the first man a kind of a long, slim greyhound, you might say the second was a rat terrier."

My mind leaped to meet the pictorial quality so amazing in this poor outcast who'd been brought to spying and other ignoble uses by Dick West. In his "greyhound" I clearly recognized Dick himself. In his "rat terrier" I found a suggestion I was loath to take.

"You're might clever at reading the outsides of folks," said Ralph Lacy appreciatively. "Can you do as well with the works that makes the machinery white?"

The man cackled. And as he spruced up and took an upright position I glimpsed something in him that was like a spark kindling soggy old timbers to a flame that might destroy, but had still a beauty to compel the eye. I wondered what manner of man he had been before he fell to the estate of being the beast of Dick West's tools And for a moment I thought I was to be answered. For as the man spoke it was in a reminiscent tone:

"I weren't allus what you see now. I were once a regular citizen. But I was a little too handy with a steel pen to hold my position in the bank and let them keep their money"——

Dignified Tone

Even his tone and manner of speech took on a dignity it seemed big enough to transcend his unshaven features and his rags. He seemed to grow and suddenly to fit Ralph Lacy's overcoat, and fit also to wear it. Then he sank back and began to whimper.

"Say—s'posin' they find out about your comin' here? S'posin' they get track of my residence on them? Can you think how I'll get mine for this? I guess if I wake up and don't find my throat cut, I'm a darn sight luckier than you expect."

"You're right!" said Ralph Lacy, briefly. "Lyons, what do you say to our moving Jennings right on with us tonight? We ought to get him started for a higher latitude by tomorrow. There's no use letting his enemy sickness get any more running start on him."

Lyons, delighted at this inquiry, which included him on such a friendly basis of equality, touched his cap respectfully to Ralph Lacy and then spoke out sturdily like the fine man he is:

"I say that Jennings would be wise to do as you suggest, sir. I'll be glad to go in and move any of his traps he says. And tonight he can sleep in our garage, where I'm thinking to consider whatever will be looking for him and then tomorrow, as bright and early as ever you say, sir, we can start him off for the new life that's going to put some flesh on his bones and hope back into his heart, sir."

Suddenly whatever there was of evil kindled in poor, gaunt, half-dead Jennings:

ENEMIES OF WOMEN

TALE OF MONTE CARLO DURING WAR

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

"IT is simply that I do not want to love you. Don't ask why. I could not explain it to you; or I should say you would not understand me. I repeat what other women have said to you: 'You are a man, and cannot understand women.' No, I don't know. We are so weak! Our wills play us such strange tricks! But you, no. . . . We know each other too well. It is impossible."

Michael spoke in a tone of sadness and chagrin.

"I don't interest you; that is easy to see."

Alicia laughed heartily and with one of her hands she tapped those of the Prince, which were clasped together.

"Silly! Do you really think I don't care for you at all! If I felt indifferent toward you, would I have sought you formerly, and would I be here with you now?"

Michael was disconcerted. "Well, then?" And he made an effort to discover what obstacle stood in the way of his desires. If it was on account of what had happened in her past life, he had forgotten it. He, Prince Lubinoff, had had many affairs that it was better not to recall.

"I know what is the matter with you. I am going to forget we belong to different sexes and talk to you like a comrade, as I talked to you that night in my study. I know the life you are leading; I also know about the Envoy's of Wurtemburg's silly idea.

"What you need now, after several months of living alone like a hermit, is a woman. Choose from those about you; you can find them whenever you like, younger and more beautiful than I, and am beginning to see myself as I am. Why do you choose me? Why do you disturb my tranquillity, now that I have forgotten all about such things?"

The Prince smiled bitterly at the suggested remedy. He often had thought of it. The censor that he kept within already had repeated the same advice. So Michael had frequented the Casino with the resolute air of a slaughterhouse man about to choose his prey from the flock. He would glance over the troop of girls in the gambling rooms, who kept one eye on the roulette table, while with the other they watched the men who were walking about behind them.

"It is for you; you and no one else," he said gloomily. "You, or no one."

Alicia replied in the same grave tones. She knew by experience what this meant. We desire with greater eagerness what is impossible for us to obtain; we single out an unique whatever is beyond our grasp.

But these reasonings exasperated Lubinoff to the extent of making him unjust.

"I know you," he said, drawing nearer on the bench, as he gazed at her more closely, with angry, passionate eyes. "I know what you women are like; you're all vain and revengeful. You can't forget the evening you wanted me and I was not willing, and now you are taking delight in my torment; you enjoy making me suffer."

"Oh, Michael!" Alicia interrupted, in a tone of protest. His indignation stirred her far more than the humility of a few moments before. It was the desperate pleading of a patient who is past recovery and desires to return to normal life.

"I love you. . . . I need you?" Above the promontory of Cap-d'Ail the orange-colored globe of the sun was descending. Its lower edge was already touching the undulating line of garden and buildings. For a moment its rays were concentrated in a sheaf seen through the colonnade of a pergola, as though showing itself through an arch of triumph before dying. A dark azure light seemed to emerge from the sea, driving the fading gold of the afternoon from the gardens.

"No! . . . No, I would!"

Alicia's voice suddenly broke the vibrant silence with the tremulousness of surprise, and immediately changed to a long gasp, as though something were weighing on her lips.

"No," was the reply.

"Ever had an accident?"

"No."

"Never had a single accident in your life?"

"Never, except last Spring when a bull tossed me over a fence."

"Don't you call that an accident?"

"No fear! He did it on purpose."

ROYAL ROMANCES

NERO AND POPPAEA SABINA

By Barbara Bayne

Emperor Nero and Poppaea Sabina.

NERO, the young Emperor of Rome, looked upon himself as omnipotent. And he was challenged by lovely woman.

Poppaea Sabina, born A. D. 31, inherited her mother's name and beauty, her amber-colored hair, her wit, her intelligence and charm. Demurely modest, yet daring, without scruple in the attainment of anything she desired, Poppaea has piqued the curiosity of all men of all ages.

Realizing that her beauty was the means by which she was to reach the heights of her ambition, this voluptuous, luxury-loving woman bestowed her favors where she would gain the greatest profit.

As the first step in reaching the side of Nero she divorced an "inconvenient" husband and married Otho, the friend and boon companion of Nero. His boasting of the charms of his wife aroused the curiosity of the young emperor, who demanded her presence at a feast.

Poppaea gauged Nero's weakness at a glance, and her fulsome praise of his manly beauty, wit and talent enchanted him. Once she had aroused his interest, Poppaea adroitly played her little comedie, posing as a faithful wife, refusing to see him save in Otho's presence, and scorning his intrigue with Acte, a slave-girl.

Nero, hopelessly ensnared by the beautiful, seductive creature, sent Otho as Governor to distant Lusitania—and Poppaea remained in Rome.

Acte was easily disposed of by banishment, but Agrippina, Nero's mother, who had been estranged for three years on Acte's account, and Octavia, his wife, stood in Poppaea's way. Adept in the art of removing obstacles from her path, she having resolved to become Empress of Rome, Poppaea used the most subtle weapons to incite Nero against them both—mocking his subservient will to his mother's insults, and condoning the childlessness of Octavia, with a veiled promise of love—a child.

The infatuated Nero, yielding at last, plotted the death of Agrippina. Three years later Poppaea, determined to remove Octavia, the final barrier. With the aid of paid witnesses she trumphed up a false charge of Octavia's infidelity.

Nero, eager to rid himself of the unloved wife through whom he had become Emperor, feigned to believe it.

Her brother, Britannicus, the rightful heir to the throne, had been removed from his path. Likewise Burrus, Octavia's powerful friend and champion.

Poppaea, declaring that his heir to be a fit inheritor of power must be born in wedlock, decided Nero. He divorced Octavia and twelve days later married Poppaea Sabina, his favorite.

A demonstration of the people convinced Poppaea that so long as Octavia lived her place was not secure. She coaxed, she taunted until Nero spurred on to desperation exiled Octavia to Pandateria.

There, on June 9, 62 A. D. the friendless girl was brutally put to death and her head sent to her rival.

One by one Poppaea had swept every "inconvenient" person from her path. At last she was Empress of Rome! She held Nero enthralled, without a rival.

But her reign, though glorious, was short, ending in her sudden death in 65 A. D.

(The next article will tell of the romance of Peter the Great and Anna Mons.)

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and it become so run-down that I cared for nothing and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines."—Mrs. Ida M. Coffman, R. R. 2, Sidell, Ill.

THE NTH COMMANDMENT

A Film Romance From the Great Story by FANNIE HURST

Read This Story of Everyday Life on This Page Day by Day and Then Watch for It on the Screen

READ THIS FIRST

In the basement of the Mammoth Department Store Spring has cast a spell among the workers. Angie Spruit, who has been on the stage, and Sara Juke, in the corset department, firm friends, feel that they should be anywhere but where they are. Jimmy Fitzgibbons, the Beau Brummel of the basement, bangs the piano and sings the latest songs, and Max Plute, who admires Angie, suggests a trip to the beach. Sara, a pretty girl, longs for the country.

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean

AFTER much indecision she decided that she needed corsets with extra long hips and as there were none of these on the shelf Sara excused herself to consult the floor-walker.

"Go on down to the stockroom and get some," he told her. Sha passed Angie on the way; the latter had a tray of artificial flowers under her arm. "Oh ain't they beautiful," exclaimed Sara.

"Them things, they're a piece of cheese," replied Angie ignoring the efforts of a customer to attract her attention. "Say, kid, ain't you goin' to the skatin' rink tonight with Harry?"

Sara shook her head: "I gotta hurry, there's a dame waitin'."

"Let her wait," was Angie's response, "that's no fresh way, these guys: say, what's wrong with you? Why do you let that cheap skate Harry Smith keep you away from all the good times?"

"He don't," Sara defended stoutly: "he wants to sit out in the park tonight—it's nice there and he's got a swell present to give me."

Own Opinion

Angie had her own opinion of how swell the gift was, but she did not give voice to it; instead she jerked her head over toward Jimmy, who was still singing, his head thrown back and the imitation diamond in his scarf sparkling under the electric light.

"When you could run around with a live wire like Jimmy, what do you got out of Harry Smith? Honest, Sara, you give me a pain. How do you get that way?"

"I should worry about Jimmy Fitzgibbons," Sara answered and hurried off to the stock room. On the way she passed Jimmy, and he smirked at her and when she returned with an armful of packages he was in full swing with a ballad of love, Springtime birds and flowers.

Sara paused a second to listen; Jimmy finished the song and spoke to her, while a second youth urged on the crowd the beauties of the song. "Every time I put over a song I'm thinking of you, doll," said Jimmy.

Sara looked down; pleasant words in a bazaar, these, even if she was going about with Harry Smith.

Jimmy was a past master in the art of flattery as practiced among his kind: "Say, Kid, those big eyes of yours has sure got me wingin'," he went on, pleased to see the flush in Sara's cheeks.

"Aw, go on, Jimmy, you're kiddin' me."

"Honest to goodness I ain't, baby," said Jimmy, placing his hand over his heart. "I can't sleep nights thinkin' about you."

Sara started to go; Jimmy whispered: "Say, I'd love to see you on skates—I'll bet you'd be the cutest of the whole bunch in the rink."

Jimmy told Max Plute that he had vamped little Miss Juke

An Adventure.

Now Sara had not been on a pair of roller skates for years, but she had seen the posters of the big rinks and wondered what it was all like. It was out of the question to go by herself, and Harry was for saving every cent against the time when they were to be married.

"Would you like to see me there?" she asked.

"Can a duck swim?" Jimmy answered scenting an adventure.

Sara did not reply, but hurried away to the waiting woman. Jimmy looked after her and a smile showed that he was satisfied with his work. So far he had been unable to make an impression on Miss Juke. The skating proposition was an inspiration. He went back to his singing with all sorts of plans in the back of his head to win Sara from Harry Smith.

On the face of it this would not seem to be a difficult task; Angie was not alone in her opinion that Sara was wasting herself on the sickly young man in the wrapping department who preferred to sit in the park to going to some real swell amusement place.

Harry's companions envied him the devotion of the attractive Sara and wondered how to account for it, especially when Jimmy had such a way with the girls. "It beats all," said one of his fellow workers to Harry. "How do they fall for Jimmy."

Lifted His Head.

Harry lifted his head in triumphant disagreement as he answered this sweeping compliment to the powers of Jimmy Fitzgibbons. "I know one girl that don't fall for him."

The speaker did not agree with Harry, his opinion of the steadfastness of women was not of the highest. He had seen Jimmy casting eyes at Sara and he imagined the rest.

"You better quit kiddin' yourself, Harry, my boy," he said. "Them two has been lampin' each other for a month past."

This was an invitation to battle. Harry made a lunge at the offender who backed away almost into the pompous head of the department, unexpectedly entering. The transition from war to peace was sudden enough to be laughable. But Harry heard the words ringing in his inner consciousness and resolved to find out what they meant. Of course, he had no reason to believe them. Sara Juke and he were as good as engaged; in fact they had been planning for months on just how to furnish their flat when they had saved enough to move into it.

And Jimmy was not one of the marrying kind, everyone knew that, he was like the vaudeville man who said he never got married because he found 'em fed 'em, flirted with 'em and forgot 'em.

Thought of Future.

It was different with Harry; he always thought of his future in connection with Sara; he had hopes of getting rid of the nasty cough that seemed to hang on, and he laughed at the doctor at the dispensary when the latter told him to take a vacation of a couple of months up in the dry air of the Adirondacks.

"I guess he thinks I'm a millionaire," said Harry when he told Sara. "I'm dead easy advising people to spend it for Palm Beach in the winter and Newport in the Summer, just as if all you had to do was to call a valley and tell him to buy the tickets."

The idea of Harry with a valet was a cause of great mirth to both of them. "I tell you," said the boy, "we're doin' the right thing savin' all we can. Them fellers like Jimmy, that spends as fast as they make, won't last, an' you an' me will be wearin' diamonds."

The necessity for saving was the main reason for Sara's non-appearance at the skating rink; it cost good money to go there. She wondered, after the talk with Angie and the honeyed words of Jimmy, whether she wasn't entitled to a little fun, after all; what was sitting in a park to whiling round on the shining floor to the music of a band?

Seeds of Unrest

Jimmy had slipped the seeds of unrest into Sara's soul with the invitation to the rink. He was as well aware of it as she was. He told Max Plute, before the day was over, that he though he'd vamped little Miss Juke.

Max chuckled. He was no friend of Harry's; it seemed ridiculous for a skinny, unattractive clerk with a cough to be running off with an attractive girl like Sara.

"Attta boy," he said to Jimmy, "you did something that time."

"And if I can make that sick cat she trails around with get onto the floor — say, I'll make a monkey of him all right."

Sara was strangely silent that evening after the store closed and Harry appeared to walk to the subway with her.

"What are you thinking about, Sara?" he asked. "About the flat, I'll bet."

"No, I wasn't," she answered frankly. "I was wondering if you and I couldn't go to the rink tonight—we ain't never been, you know."

"You'd rather do that than sit in the park?" asked the boy wistfully.

"I'm kinda sick of the park, Harry; they ain't nothin' doin' in the park — no excitement — and there's fun at the rink. Angie's goin' an' Jimmy and Max Plute, too; they go regular; they have a good time all right."

"Jimmy," sniffed Harry; "he's no man. He's just a vamp, that's all he is."

"Well, I guess you can't say anything about Angie—anyone that's been on the stage like she has—she knows a thing or two—it's got to be lively anywheres she'll go—"

There was no gainsaying that Angie knew more about good times than any other girl in The Mammoth; her past experience made her a centre of envy to every one of them; for she did not let the glamour thus evoked grow dim by failing to refer to her exploits on the stage. In the words of Mr. Plute she was "some kid."

She and her friends were willing to make a comparison of Sara; a girl as good looking as Miss Juke was an asset anywhere, but they couldn't stand Harry; not because he was uncouth and coughed, but because Sara seemed to like him.

For Mr. Fitzgibbons had been in earnest when he said he was going to try to make a monkey of Harry. This task might have been difficult under other circumstances, but Harry on roller skates was as much at his mercy as though he had been tied hand and foot.

Jimmy skating gracefully, whirled over to the bench where Sara, her cheeks red with the excitement of this novel experience, was trying on her skates.

"Hello, people," said Jimmy, "we you've joined the merry throng. Well, see you later," and he glided away to watch the manoeuvers of the newcomers.

Elementary

Harry's knowledge of skating was extremely elementary; Sara had had exercise in that elusive art on the streets, and with a good partner she could have made a show at least of efficiency. But Harry was anything but a good partner; they started off uncertainly and the boy began to laugh as they clung to each other to keep from falling.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

BE SURE TO READ THEM TO CHILDREN

By Blanche Silver.

David Hears a Strange Story.

DAVID just couldn't seem to get interested in his studies, but sat at his desk biting on his slate-pencil, when a queer noise startled him.

"Please! Please!" cried a tiny voice, and David looked out in the aisle. "Thank you very much," continued the tiny voice. "It isn't very nice to be eaten, you know."

Here David laughed and pulled a big red apple out of his desk. He couldn't think of anything else he had that he could eat, so he supposed of course it must be the apple talking.

But when he spoke to it, the tiny voice answered from his hand and David's eyes opened with wonder when he saw the end of his slate-pencil nod back at him.

"My goodness gracious!" exclaimed David, rubbing his eyes. "I thought my slate-pencil nodded at me. Wasn't that funny?"

"Nothing funny about that," laughed the slate-pencil, and David almost jumped out of his seat. "What is there funny about my shaking my head at you? I thought you were going to bite my head off. It reminded me of a time when I was just a wee little sliver of slate, part of a big hill."

"Here! Here!" laughed David, his eyes fairly dancing. "I believe you're going to tell me a fairy story. Who ever heard of a slate-pencil being a hill! Ha! Ha!" and David laughed right out loud.

"Well, I suppose it does seem funny to you," replied the slate-pencil, "but nevertheless it's true. When I first opened my eyes—I mean the one thing I remember about my early life—I was a tiny sliver of slate, part of a big rock that made up the greater part of a hill. The sun shone on me, the birds sang over me, and I was the happiest little slate boy you can imagine. Then one day some men who had been busy nearby, working in what they called the 'slate quarry,' came along.

"My, how they banged and hacked at my mother, my brothers and sisters and myself!"

"Were you dreadfully frightened?" asked David, all interest.

"At first," laughed the slate-pencil boy. "But my mother whispered to me that it was all right—that sooner or later all good slate boys went out into the big world to help."

"What Happened Next?"

"Dear me!" exclaimed Dicky. "What happened next?"

"Well," replied the slate pencil, looking very wise and experienced, "I was jostled and pushed, and bumped and banged until at last I found myself made into a lovely slate pencil.

"At first things happened so swiftly I didn't like it, but now that I've found what a great deal of good I can do, I'm perfectly happy and contented. Why, I wouldn't go back to my other life for anything."

The slate pencil paused to shake his head. Then he went on:

"Now all I ask of you is to be careful not to let me fall on the floor and break my back, until you've learned all your letters and numbers. After that it won't be so bad. But little boys and girls who don't know the history of us slate pencil boys, are not always careful of us. Oh, I could tell you wonderful tales about my life."

Here the teacher rapped on her desk and called David up to his lesson. He whispered good-bye to the slate pencil boy and carefully laid him down so he wouldn't roll off the desk and break—for David was eager to learn more of the little slate pencil's stories.

Ludwig — Darling, I have just gotten hold of that book about Paris that the censors refused to pass. Everybody is talking about it and I though you might like to read it.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Mary Blake Says:

Today Unlucky For The INDOLENT.

A PECULIAR combination of aspects exists today. They are neither good nor bad. They conduce to negative states, or indifference and lack of interest. They indicate confusion or misunderstanding. It would, therefore, be wise to avoid making any changes or decisions of importance and, over and above all, risky financial ventures.

Today you will observe an inability to make up your mind with that ease that has been shown on other occasions. You will feel an indication of charsoter and a lack of initiative. You will, possibly, under the influences that control you, feel indolent and unable to concentrate.

BITS OF WISDOM

Many of us have an unfortunate obsession that always the better part of valor is discretion. Sometimes however, duty calls for a courage that sets against a host of dangers.

FORCE OF LIGHT RAYS

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"It has never seemed to me possible for the earth and other planets to maintain their position in space through the powers of gravity alone. Do not the light rays exert pressure against the earth, and, if so, is there not a repelling power exerted by such rays, and an attracting power by gravity? It seems to me that the location of the earth about the sun, where these powers thrown out by the sun are equal.—O. R. P., Decatur, Ill."

YOU have hit upon a very interesting subject, and a phenomenon which may conceal great effects not yet disclosed to our experience. Light does exert pressure, and according to the best estimates the light pouring from the sun pushes against the earth with a force equivalent to 74,000 tons. That at first glance seems a very considerable push, but it is only one-forty-seventhousandth part of the attractive force with which the sun holds the earth in its orbit.

Nevertheless, this push of the light-waves must have some effect on the earth's motion, just as, if you had a gigantic ball, weighing thousands of tons, suspended in a vacuum and swinging without friction, around in a circle, the pressure of a child's hand constantly pushing against it would gradually deviate it from its course.

Professor J. H. Poynting has shown that the light pressure on bodies revolving around the sun (in case they are not so small that the gravitational pull of the sun is less than the pressure upon them) has three effects: (1) It lengthens their periods of revolution; (2) it tends to make their orbits more circular; (3) it draws them spirally inward, so that eventually they will join the sun.

He has also calculated that the effect of the light pressure on a black body, having the same density as that of the earth, and a radius of one centimeter, and starting at the earth's distance, would be to cause it to approach the sun, in a spiral becoming more and more nearly a circle, so that in about 90,000,000 years it would reach the sun.

DEAR Miss Adams:

It has often occurred to me to congratulate friends on different reasons. Which is proper, "May I congratulate you, Mr.——" or "Congratulations to you."

INQUIRER.

It is less abrupt to say: "I congratulate you, Mr. Doe."

Then it is gracious to add some definite reference to the reason for the congratulations.

Put in a saucepan 3 marshmallows, add 2 tablespoons of milk, let melt. Then add small piece of butter the size of two confectioners' sugar. DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR HAS BEEN USED FOR OVER SEVENTY YEARS

Mothers: Read what this Woman did for Her Children

Mrs. Bradley and Children

Mrs. Alexander Bradley of Danbury, Conn., says: "After 14 long years trying different remedies I have at last found a good medicine—Dr. True's Elixir. I was nearly discouraged. I was giving the oldest girl something nearly every night, but now I keep a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir handy, and only give it occasionally. I have tried so many things, but now as soon as I see signs of worms I give Dr. True's Elixir for quick relief."

In another letter Mrs. Bradley writes: "My son, 14 years of age, was always troubled with worms when small and Dr. True's was unknown to me then. I always have it on hand now. Now please print this letter so other anxious mothers may know the good results which follow Dr. True's Elixir for children suffering with worms and constipation, as I cannot recommend it too highly."

A mother of six children writes: "My baby was very sick and a friend of mine suggested trying Dr. True's Elixir. Now I have six children and am never without Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller in my house."—Mrs. B. N. Gile, West Newbury, Mass.

Dr. True's Elixir contains imported herbs of strictly pure quality. Insist on this family laxative.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 501 Asylum St., Flint, Mich., wrote: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and it was your medicine, Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, that helped her."

Worms are quickly driven out of the system and good health restored if you use Dr. True's Elixir.

Mrs. William G. Bonin of Caddo, Oklahoma, says: "We used Dr. True's Elixir for our children for the last 12 years and certainly know the value of it." You can buy Dr. True's Elixir wherever medicine is sold. Pleasant tasting — gentle acting.

Mrs. Henry Johnson of 820 West Hayward Ave., Baltimore, says: "I have bought Dr. True's Elixir for over 10 years and know it is good." She uses it to rid her children of worms.

Mrs. Anselme Lamarre, 29 State St., Sanford, Me., wrote: "My daughter, Gertrude, had dizzy spells and could not even go out, for she always complained of being sick. She used your worm expeller. She never had any fits since. I feel very grateful to you."

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW!

THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN SUFFER FROM WORMS AND THEIR MOTHERS DO NOT KNOW WHAT THE TROUBLE IS.

Look at your child NOW. If you have the least suspicion that any of these symptoms are reflected in any of your children, start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale faces, eyes heavy and dull, short, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, tongue coated and covered with little red points, starting during sleep with troublesome dreams, slow fever.

Mothers—Dr. True's Elixir has been given children for four generations and it truly corrects child ailments. Try a bottle today. It is good for adults, too.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

The latest Wall Street-Durant gossip is that he has hatched a plan to launch a "thirty million dollar bank."

As Mr. Durant is now several thousand miles from New York, I cannot say whether the story is well founded or not. It may be Mr. Durant is bubbling over with enthusiasm over his financial operations. He struck me as being far more interested in that than in the building of motor cars.

His ambition, as I gathered from him, is not to confine his financing operations to raising scores of millions of capital for Durant enterprises, but to evolve the greatest security-distributing machinery America has ever known, handling issues for different enterprises entirely apart from his own.

His vision, his talk along these lines caused me to ask him how on earth he figured upon being able to undertake and successfully handle such colossal assignments in addition to organizing and running factory after factory on a mammoth scale. Mr. Durant replied with one of his peculiarly winning smiles, that he had learned something about organization and that, given the right organization, many things were possible.

I am in hopes that the replies to the first dozen or so of my questions addressed to Mr. Durant will come along about the end of this column has been laid before him a total of fifty questions.

If the sugar industry doesn't want to run foul of public opinion and Washington, the speculators in it had better watch their steps. There is no sound economic reason why we should have to pay the present exorbitant price for a pound of sugar.

Morris & Company, the packers, are reported to broaden their ownership of banks once their present packing business is taken over by Armour & Company. It is understood that quite a part of the Morris millions are invested in bank stocks, particularly in and around Chicago.

It would seem to be a pity if the young Eddie Morris got out of the packing business for the reason he always impressed me as being a master packer, thoroughly familiar with every phase and branch of the business, practical, not merely a theoretical, expert.

Coming events cast their shadows before. It is significant that Morris & Company's right hand man, Charlie MacFarlane, has gone over to Wilson & Company as vice-president, treasurer and director. MacFarlane is a level headed Scot, who early switched from the packing to business fields, and thirty-four years ago hitched on with Morris & Company. He exhibited very special financial talent, and as treasurer has been extremely helpful to Swift & Company as well as to their outside banking activities.

I recall that Tom Wilson spoke to me very highly of Charlie MacFarlane a long time ago, and I've no doubt he is particularly delighted over his "promotion."

Some towering men of affairs arrive at important decisions slowly. Others make quick-as-a-wink minds in a flash and issue decisions long, long, thing.

Harriman was a notable latter type, as this anecdote, which I have wormed out of Will Crocker, president of the Crocker National Bank of San Francisco, reveals.

Mr. Crocker was in New York in April, 1906, when he received a telegram conveying news of the terrible San Francisco catastrophe. He immediately rose from the desk to inform his close friend, Ed Harriman. The latter was at breakfast. After a brief talk of the catastrophe Mr. Harriman chatted pleasantly on other topics, such as that the Crocker boys had been on the street in day before.

As Mr. Crocker opened the door to leave Harriman called to him, as an afterthought: "By the way, I am leaving for San Francisco in the car this afternoon at 2. Will be glad to have your company if you care to go." And off Harriman swung across the continent—to render fundamentally invaluable assistance to the stricken city.

WALSH WARNS AGAINST U. S. IN LEAGUE

Washington, March 17.—"Americans who are so eager to have us join the international court under the League of Nations have a small understanding of what such a move would mean to their country," said Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts in an interview.

"It means getting the United States into the league, and using our money and our resources to put Europe on its feet, to the detriment of our own people and our own form of government," the Senator added.

David I. Walsh.

Senator Walsh came down from Massachusetts for the purpose of delivering a St. Patrick's Day address in Philadelphia. Asked if he had found sentiment in his State developing in favor of American entrance into the court, the Senator said:

"There is considerable sentiment in Massachusetts in favor of President Harding's proposal. However, I have found, for the most part, that this sentiment exists principally among the same people who were so anxious to have the United States join the league."

5-CENT FARE TRAFFIC AIDS 'L' RECEIPTS

A feature of the gain in receipts made by the Boston Elevated system during February was the growth in the amount of five-cent fare traffic. This amounted to 52.4 per cent. of the total traffic, as compared with 19.4 per cent. the February before.

During February, the "L" made $148,812 above the cost of operation. It was the most profitable February in the history of the road, despite the fact that the cost of snow removal was heavy.

Edward Dana, general manager, in giving out the statistics, said January and February of this year were record months for the road, with a total profit of $345,501.40.
